Little Appointed to Saegertown UMC

Announced: 03-18-2018

About Jeffrey B. Little

Jeff Little was born and raised in Erie, Pennsylvania. He graduated with an art degree from Edinboro University and was an aspiring cartoonist. Jeff worked with youth ministry while trying to break into the world of art. He ended up working as a campus minister at Edinboro University with the CCO (Coalition for Christian Outreach).

After working with campus ministry Jeff worked as a manager of a Christian bookstore and eventually became a full-time youth director at a United Methodist church in Franklin, PA. Growing up in the United Methodist Church he realized while doing youth ministry that he had been running from pastoral ministry.

Jeff graduated from Asbury Seminary in 2010. He began his opportunity of ministry serving both Johnsonburg United Methodist Church (as a senior pastor) and Kane First United Methodist Church. In 2011 he continued the pastoral journey at Franklin First United Methodist Church where he currently serves. He will begin a new chapter July 1 at Saegertown UMC.

Jeff loves to incorporate art in worship has a passion for discipleship and relational small group ministries. When not involved with ministry, Jeff enjoys drawing, bike riding, board games and hanging out with his cat Sam.

About Saegertown UMC

Saegertown Church has been a source of strength and stability for the folks in Crawford County since 1829, when an ecumenical effort among Methodist, Lutheran and German Reform persons founded "Three Faiths Church." Since then, the Methodist Church has grown and prospered; today the congregation is visionary and vital. Their ministry touches the lives of children, youth and adults. They partner with community groups to reach out in several ways. They care for one another and for those who have no one else to whom to turn. They are always dreaming about the next-best-step, deep in prayer to discern the will of God for them and for the world. They offer various styles of worship and lots of educational opportunities in order to meet the spiritual needs of persons from various backgrounds and walks of life.
