

Current Issue

Subscriptions
Newsletters

Home | Advertise | About Us | Contact | Publications

GULF SHORE BUSINESS

Articles Departments Events The Scene Relocation Guide Subscribe Free Newsletters eBrochures Contests

- After Hours
- Bouncing Commitment
- Business Class
- D.C. Digest
- From The Editor
- Hot Couture
- Leading Question
- Marketing Matters
- Office Politics
- Ranked
- Rebuilding the Housing Market
- Shop Talk
- Sold!
- The Art of Negotiation
- Tools of The Trade

Articles > Past Issues > 2011 > October 2011 > After Hours

After Hours

For What Ales You

Author: Kristie Aronow
Photographer: Alex Stafford

There are moments in Dan DeLisi's life when he can be part mad scientist, part beverage artist. Equipped with a big pot, tubing and a mixture of special ingredients, he'll retreat to concoct batches of a tasty brew—beer, that is.

The vice president of DeLisi Fitzgerald Inc., a multiservice consulting firm in Fort Myers that specializes in land use planning and civil engineering, has been brewing beer since college. "Me and my roommate thought it was a better way of drinking better beer," DeLisi says.

DeLisi's specialty is pumpkin ale, but he intends to try to perfect it further by testing two different strains of yeast this year. The two brews will yield 16 six-packs, which will mostly be donated to charity auctions.

DeLisi drinks beer made by others, too, for inspiration and because he still hasn't broken the formula for wheat beer, his favorite.

advertisement

advertisement

To Promote and Serve Business and Community

(239) 549-6900

www.capecoralchamber.com

www.chambercertificate.com

advertisement