BEAR[®] ARCHERY 1966

Now — The Bow That Only Bear Would Dare To Build!

Since 1960, when Bear first introduced the 52" Kodiak® Magnum, tens of thousands of Magnum users have proven Bear's ability to make a successful short hunting bow.

Now, Bear introduces the bow they said could not be made—a 48" hunting bow—the BEAR SUPER MAGNUM 48!

How did Bear do it? With five solid years of experience in making the world's most popular 52" bow, plus the use of the new high compression material used in the Tamerlane HC-30, Bear has done it!

A 48" hunting bow with the power and speed of a full-sized bow. Just think of the advantages . . . you're crouched in your blind . . . you hear a rustling . . . suddenly, you're eyeball to antler with a giant rack! No time for untangling five feet of bow—just time to raise and fire 48" of solid bow-power! Man . . . that bow is paid for right now.

The most spectacular hunting bow ever, the Bear Super Magnum 48 is panther-black with white accenting caps. The showpiece of any hunting camp, any trophy room. The bow that every bowhunter needs—whether he's got one bow or dozens. And with it comes a heavily-padded, fleece-lined leather-grained expanded vinyl bow case—custom made for a perfect fit.

Bear HC-30

As a tournament archer, you're only one-half of a shooting team. You can develop your form and technique. Train your hand and eye. But vibration, lack of balance, or instability of your bow will limit your scores.

That's why top archers are turning to the extraordinary Bear HC-30.

HC-30 has 30% less recoil at the point of contact with your hand. Much less vibration. Much greater balance and stability. Why? Because the bow's 30% greater mass weight is scientifically distributed.

Our master bowyer did it by breaking with tradition. He replaced the wood in the handle and riser sections with a new high-density material. He designed the sight window $\frac{1}{8}$ " beyond the center of the bow. Merely by adjusting the nylon arrow plate, you can "fine tune" the HC-30 to match your individual shooting style—to give you every last ounce of the accuracy and performance that's been designed into this incredibly smooth and stable bow. (And you can order it with either regular handle or full pistol grip.)

The HC-30 — a velvet-black, velvet-smooth beauty whose performance has to be seen to be really believed.

If you're interested in archery and fine design and craftsmanship, see the Bear HC-30.

Standard-equipped with the famous Bear Custom Rest and Adjustable Arrow Plate. Accepts the Bear Premier Bowsight. May also be special-ordered without sight routing or decorative cover plate.

Your Bear HC-30 comes to you in the luxurious L-981 bow case in jet black. See page 22 for details.

Bear Tamerlane

In every field, there are works of craftsmanship that represent the ultimate in performance and beauty. A fine gun. A custom automobile. A great bow.

In archery, this design leadership belongs to Bear Tamerlane. It is now, and has been, the finest wood laminate bow in the history of the bowyer's art.

For 1966, Bear has kept this classic beauty intact, and added to its versatility. Archers may now order the Bear Tamerlane with either regular handle or full pistol grip. One more way to assure the perfect match of bow to archer.

We strongly suggest that you see the Bear Tamerlane at your Bear dealer's. Even if you're not in the market for one. Just to see the glory of its hand-rubbed Brazilian Rosewood and polished, high density caps. To sense the pride and skill that have gone into its construction. To say you've seen the world's most beautiful bow.

Bear Kodiak®

A fair test of any hunting bow is . . . who uses it. And where.

The Bear Kodiak is Fred Bear's personal hunting bow. He has used it in the big game areas of the world. The Bear Kodiak has brought down every single one of Fred Bear's record trophies.

There isn't anything stronger we can say about the shooting and handling characteristics of the Bear Kodiak, or about its ruggedness.

In fact, perfectionist that he is, our master bowyer could think of only a very few changes to make this year.

A new crowned arrow rest, for one. When you sight your quarry, draw, aim and shoot, the arrow literally sneaks away from the bow. The crowned arrow rest is convex, with the arrow resting on the peak of the curve. Thus, there is a minimum of contact between arrow and the surface of the rest. The result is less friction and a quieter, cleaner release. Kodiak lovers will instantly recognize (and appreciate) the other appearance changes—the lustrous Golden Rosewood handle, the complementing Forest Brown glass, the vibrant eager-for-action riser design.

See your Bear dealer soon for a look at Fred Bear's personal bow—the world's most popular hunting bow—now available in both 60" and 64" lengths! (For hunters who prefer a sight, the Kodiak may be routed, on order, to accept the finest—the Bear Hunting Bowsight. NOTE—BOWS OVER 50 LBS. CANNOT BE ROUTED.)

Your new Kodiak can be ordered camouflage-painted for only $5.00 additional.

Bear Kodiak® Magnum

You're in a tight, cramped spot. You sight your quarry through thick brush. You're going to have to crouch for a clear shot . . .

Here, a standard-size hunting bow would be awkward. Bringing it to a full draw would be difficult.

That's why thousands of bowhunters prefer the 52" Bear Kodiak Magnum. The counterpart in archery of the carbine—the gun that won the West. Like the carbine, it takes up little space when packing for a trip. It's easy to carry. Operates in cramped spaces. And, packs a full-sized wallop. You can shoot it comfortably and accurately from any position: kneeling, standing, crouching, or even sitting.

The Bear Kodiak Magnum is as husky as any of its bigger brothers in the Bear hunting bow line. Virtually impervious to climate, terrain, and use.

It's short on length (52"), but not on looks. Riser woods are spectacularly-grained Golden Rosewood complemented by Bubinga.

Like the Bear Kodiak, the Bear Kodiak Magnum has the new Bear crowned arrow rest for a quieter, cleaner release.

Bear Kodiak Magnum is the most popular short hunting bow in the world today. And it's at your Bear dealer's—now!

Your new Kodiak Magnum can be ordered camouflage-painted for only $5.00 additional.

Bear Polar®

The Bear Polar is for archers who appreciate the shooting and handling qualities of a fine tournament bow, but find most of them just beyond their budgets.

The brand new Bear Polar solves this problem.

Its striking appearance is that of far more expensive bows. White glass. Decorative handle overlays. Richly-grained Bubinga and Zebrawood. A bow with the luxury look!

On the range, Bear Polar matches in performance many bows which cost much more. It rests easily in your hand. Remains steady on release. Casts an arrow with the speed and accuracy of a plummeting hawk.

The Bear Polar is inexpensive enough to use solely for casual target shooting or games like archery golf. Yet it has the good breeding necessary for tournament shooting.

There's a 63" Bear Polar for people who have a short draw. A 66" Polar for those who prefer a longer bow. They're twins in looks and performance.

Both are equipped with the handsome Bear Custom Rest and Adjustable Arrow Plate. Both will accept the Bear Premier Bowsight.

The 66" Bear Polar accepts the 7" Premier Bowsight, the 63" Polar the 5" Premier. You may also specially order a Bear Polar without sight routing or arrow plate.

However you want it, we guarantee you will want it . . . when you see Bear's brand new POLAR.

Bear Alaskan[®]

Our master bowyer at Grayling pulled a surprise on us this year. A brand-new all-American tournament bow—the Bear Alaskan!

He created a special new design for it—exotic Bubinga combined with the “expensive look” of white glass.

However, the real surprise is in its performance. We were impressed by the way it fired arrows flat and straight, by the firmness of its limbs, by the natural, comfortable grip. “A shootin’ fool” we said.

But, we thought, a fairly high-priced bow. We were dead wrong.

The new Bear Alaskan is a popular-priced tournament bow any archer can afford to own.

It’s inexpensive enough for the occasional archer. The fellow who doesn’t shoot too often, but wants a good bow when he does.

It’s an excellent tournament bow for the archer who’s serious enough, but who has to stretch his dollars. It even has the Bear Custom Rest and Adjustable Arrow Plate as standard equipment . . . same as on the Bear Tamerlane! And it’s routed to accept the Bear Premier Bowsight. (May be special-ordered without routing or sight plate.) It’s the all-new Bear ALASKAN—the new name in fine bows, now at your Bear dealer’s.

Bear Grizzly®

There are two kinds of bowhunters who need a Bear Grizzly.

One is the bowhunter who wants a purebred hunting bow with a minimum investment. He finds the Bear Grizzly a tough, dependable, first-class hunting partner.

The second is the man who's decided to take advantage of two-season hunting . . . the rifle-hunter who wants to add a bow to his gun rack. He'll find the Bear Grizzly is a real sporting arm—a bow with guts and stamina. A hunting weapon that'll bring down anything on four legs.

The Bear Grizzly is rugged. Rugged as its name. Draws nice and easy. Releases quick and clean—with an absolute minimum of friction, thanks to the new crowned arrow rest. And the famous bowhunter's grip makes you feel like you're shaking hands with an old friend.

For many years, the Bear Grizzly has been far-and-away the most popular hunting bow in its class. It appeals to the novice and expert alike. It cuts the mustard on both looks and performance. Like a cook in camp, it's indispensable on a hunting trip. See it at your Bear dealer's.

Bear Tigercat®

Bear is very proud of its new 1966-model Tigercat. In its own way, this year's Bear Tigercat is as much of a breakthrough in archery as the Bear Tamerlane and Tamerlane HC-30.

Here's why.

To really get the most out of archery, you need a fine bow. But, up until now, a fine bow has been out of the reach of a lot of people.

Not any more.

In Bear Tigercat, you have the full recurve design, the features, the performance, the craftsmanship you'd expect to find only in much higher-priced bows. Backed by our thirty years of archery manufacture, we at Bear believe that it's far and away the best full recurve on the market for the price.

And, look at that price. Now, everyone can afford a fine bow. Just to ice the cake, you can even special order your Bear Tigercat with the Bear Premier (S-190) Rest.

Tips on sharpening your Bear Razorheads®

Razorheads are factory-sharpened, but should have additional sharpening before being used on game. This is best done with a mill file such as our K-251. File toward the point and at the original bevel. Finish up by holding the file flat on the bevel at a 90° angle to arrow shaft and take five or six light strokes on both sides of edge. This has the same effect as a butcher's steel in removing burr for best final cutting surface. Do not file main blade to long slender point. A rounded, chisel point (see illustration) will prevent it from curling when striking hard bone.

Point Styles Available

These are the four popular point styles available on Bear Arrows. Type of point is listed under each.

Selecting Correct Arrows

Preferred Method—Method 1

Draw a measuring arrow (marked in inches) in your bow. At full draw, your correct arrow length is the point at which the arrow stops in relation to the front of the arrow shelf. See illustration above.

Bear Razorheads®

Preferred and used by six out of every 10 Pope & Young record-holders

A four-blade, razor-sharp broadhead acclaimed as the most lethal hunting head ever developed. Two precision made blades combined. The main blade of mill-tempered spring steel is silver brazed to a one-piece steel ferrule and is long-bevel ground and honed to extreme sharpness. An easily replaceable, lightweight auxiliary blade, also of razor steel, completes the four edge broadhead.

Although the main blade comes from the factory extremely sharp, heads should be further filed or honed to achieve complete effectiveness. Also, after each use the main blade should be filed at the original bevel. Auxiliary blades should be discarded after each hunting shot. However, they can be sharpened at camp by first using a medium stone to bring up the edge then honing with a very fine stone. (See page 17)

Fred Bear advises you on progressive outfitting!

There is a great difference in the archery tackle requirements of the archer who shoots for recreation and the one who aspires to be a champion, or between the roving stump shooter and the big game trophy hunter.

You and your family can enjoy years of recreational shooting with a modest outfit such as a Cub Bow, a Spartan Armguard, Master Glove, and a Mohican Quiver. The Cub is a composite bow (laminated of wood and fiberglass) and as such has the feel and action of the best bows—tremendous performance for the money. Wooden arrows of cedar such as the Standard Grade are the best for the first few weeks of shooting, when arrows have a habit of disappearing. Soon you will want more closely spine-matched High Grades or even spine and weight matched Top Grades which are even more accurate.

As your shooting improves you'll need that extra help better equipment can give. Graduate to A-20 arrows and a Polar® Bow or even better the famed Kodiak® Special. At this time, you will be doing enough shooting to appreciate the convenience of a Tournament Quiver and the smoothness of a Pro Glove.

Finally, when you're ready to go after those Championship scores, let Tamerlane HC-30 help you. The Tamerlane is designed and proven to give you every assist possible—balance, stability, speed and the Positive Position Grip. Tamerlane with matched Bear Easton or glass arrows will actually smooth out the variations in your shooting technique to give you the tightest groups on target possible. As an experienced archer, you will know which Bear accessories complement your style to improve your score. You might find that the ultra-clean release of a fresh Pre-furred Tab and the loose, stable grip permitted by a bow sling adds the 10 points between first and fourth place. And since good shots are notoriously hard on nocks, you will probably want a Trophy Quiver to carry a good supply of fresh arrows so you can finish a full day's shooting.

Of course the finest equipment improves the accuracy of any shooter. If you know archery is your game and know the weight bow you want to shoot, you will learn faster and gain confidence quicker starting with the best.

Selecting Recreational and Tournament Equipment

For recreational and tournament shooting you must select a bow that you can hold easily. If you have never shot a bow before, a good rule of thumb is to buy a bow which you can hold at full draw for 10 seconds. A little tremor is all right, but if you start to shake, the bow is too heavy. The muscles used for archery will develop quickly. With two weeks of 30-minutes-a-day practice, you can hold the proper weight bow comfortably all day long. If you have shot before and your muscles have already developed, better buy a bow you can hold without shaking for 20 seconds.

For accurate shooting, the arrow must match your bow weight. If an arrow matches the bow properly it snakes around the bow when shot. It actually doesn't touch the bow except for the first inch or so of travel. The most important factor in this fitting is stiffness. That is why all Bear arrows are matched in spine (stiffness). The more expensive the arrows, the closer they are matched, until the ultimate, Bear Eastons, which are precisely uniform in stiffness, weight distribution, center of gravity, diameter and wall thickness. The weight of the bow the arrows match is written on the end label of the box. The length is also noted.

Buy an arrow long enough to let you stretch out when drawing. To determine arrow length come to full draw (fingers in the corner of your mouth and bow arm straight); stretch out and have someone measure the distance from your fingers to the far side of the bow. You may find that as you develop and smooth out your shooting form your draw increases. Buy arrows long enough, but don't overdo it. Unnecessary length means extra weight that robs you of velocity.

Roving is the Carefree Sport

If your heart is in the woods and fields, roving may be your meat . . . the glorious, carefree sport of wandering through the woods shooting at any interesting, safe target. Bagging small game, should they appear, isn't against the rules by any means. (Check hunting laws in your state.) For a start, the Bear Cub does a wonderful job in the field, but you will want a large back quiver such as the Texan to hold an assortment of field point, blunt and broadhead arrows. A Master Glove and a Hunter Armguard (to hold loose clothing tight to your arm) will complete the required tackle except for the missiles. Wooden arrows cost less, but accuracy counts here, too.

Money buys accuracy in arrows, and if your area is such that you don't lose many arrows, the durability of the A-20 makes it the most economical . . . as well as terrifically accurate. About the only thing that will break an A-20 is sidelapping a tree or other objects.

As your shooting improves and the hunter in you emerges, you will want to step up to the Grizzly®. You will want a quiver that keeps your arrows silent and ready for use as the Huntsman Quiver or the Fred Bear Bow Quiver does.

Selecting the Hunting Equipment

Finally the opportunity comes for big game hunting: fox, deer, elk, moose, bear or what have you. Now, you will have to carefully plan the proper equipment around the type of country, the weather, and the hunting conditions.

The power packed Kodiak® is my first choice, unless I am shooting from a tree, blind, boat or other such close quarters. Then I use a Kodiak® Magnum. The convenience of this little beauty in this type of hunting makes the choice of the Magnum more than worthwhile. Durable, accurate A-20's are a must. If brush will be a problem, the Fred Bear Bow Quiver will allow you to carry your arrows through without a thought, and arrows can't be any handier for that second shot. If you anticipate much rain, the St. Charles Quiver will keep your arrows dry as well as sharp and quiet. By this time you will appreciate the positive position of the Pro Cordovan glove.

Men should not hunt big game with bows of less than 45 pounds. Few people come ready equipped with muscles to handle a bow of this weight, but any normal person under sixty can develop a physique to handle this weight and much more.

No one will ever develop to shoot heavier bows by practicing with lighter ones. One could shoot a 40 pound bow for years and never be able to handle a fifty-pound weight. Muscles are developed by overworking them and breaking them down. The human body responds by rushing reserves in larger numbers than are needed and the muscles are built up stronger.

Obtain a bow of proper hunting weight. Shoot it until you become too tired to hold it back at full draw. You may shoot only a dozen arrows and these only two at a time for several days.

On the third day, shoot again, but only two or three arrows at a time. Perhaps eighteen can be shot at this time.

I cannot over-emphasize the danger of developing bad habits when working out with a heavy bow. This can be prevented by being certain that every shot is taken at a full and extended draw and that at least a second or two is taken for aiming.

Continue exercise every other day. An average person can, in this way, develop himself to handle as much as 60 to 70 pounds, which is the most anyone needs for the largest of big game. Not everyone will want to put this much into archery hunting but any archer can easily work into a 50 pound bow, which is satisfactory for deer, black bear or other animals of this size.

Whatever your inclinations are, you'll find pleasure and satisfaction in the interesting sport of archery.

How to take care of your bow

Take care of your bow . . . while not in use, keep your bow unstrung. Hang it vertically or lay it across pegs supporting both limbs. Keep it in a bow case in a cool, dry spot.

When used in rain or snow, wipe dry before storing. In cold weather, flex bow several times to "warm it up." Occasionally, apply a light coat of furniture wax to protect finish.

To measure brace height (fistmele), measure at right angles to the string from the deepest cut in the handle on the face of the bow, below the arrow shelf.

The proper brace height for your bow (and for you) depends almost entirely on your shooting style and the conditions under which you are shooting. All Bear bow strings are exactly the right size for Bear bows at the time each leaves the factory. However there is no "set" brace height which will give you maximum performance every time. For example, as your bow "warms up" during a shooting session, any string will tend to stretch a bit. After a period of disuse, the string will return to its original length. For this reason alone, it is important that you "tune" your bowstring to your bow before (and sometimes during) each shooting session, bracing the bow at the brace height that will give you:

1. Least wrist slap
2. Least string noise and vibration when shooting.
3. An arrow that does not wobble in flight.

Your brace height will never need to be lower than that provided by a fresh Bear bowstring, placed on the bow without twisting. To increase brace height, simply twist the string to shorten the length.

Stringing your Recurved Bows

Place bow handle under thigh, lower tip across front of opposite ankle. Raise heel to keep tip off ground. Apply pressure against recurve, not bow tip. Slip upper loop into nock, while watching string alignment on lower recurve.

Or . . .

use the new Bow-Pal Bowstringer. Just stand on the cord after attaching it to your bow. The bow tips bend as you pull up—ready for easy, safe stringing. For more information on the Bow-Pal Bowstringer, see page 27.
