Interview Savvy for the Officer Candidate

Being an officer is more than simply being a good dancer and leader; it is being a graceful, social role model. Please allow me to share with you my knowledge of what is to be expected of a Lionette officer beyond her dance skills. My information is current and is endorsed by leaders in the dance/drill industry, such as Ms. Dana Blair, Director of the World Famous Rangerettes and her assistant director and choreographer, Ms. Shelley Wayne.

All seminars are conducted by Cindi Rains. This program offers the necessary essentials for expressing oneself through socially correct behavior; therefore, these are crucial, fundamental guidelines for any Lionette officer candidate. The interview training process includes how to meet and greet the judges, how to sit and use essential non-verbal communication, and how to answer questions honestly yet with political correctness. I use over 100 questions in my training seminar; these are the same questions I ask officer candidates all over the East Texas area when I judge for their directors. It will not only build self-confidence but will also teach social skills that will lead to a more pleasurable and less stressful officer selection process. This is most definitely an opportunity you will want to take advantage of.
