

WYOMING ARCHAEOLOGY AWARENESS MONTH

2017 TEE SHIRT

This year's Wyoming Archaeology apparel design is adapted from a shield currently on display at the Buffalo Bill Center of the West in Cody, Wyoming. The bear painted on the rawhide shield is attributed to the Hidatsa. It represents a grizzly bear, the most powerful wildlife animal in Wyoming. Grizzlies are both feared and revered. Not surprisingly, Plains Indians recognized them as symbols of strength and courage. Bears were illustrated on shields, robes, tipi covers, in ledger drawings and rock art; imitated in dances and songs; and used as a name for successful warriors. Bears on shields are often shown with the whole body in profile, but bear paws arranged in various ways on the shield are also common. One motif shows a bear's forequarters as the bear emerges from its den. The "standing bear" motif on this shield is a striking example of a full facing bear. It is there to protect the shield's owner and to symbolically attack the enemy. The bows and guns to the side of the bear probably represent weapons captured by the shield's owner. The design is used with the concurrence of the Hidatsa Tribe.

The shirts are 100% heavyweight cotton. Short and long sleeve shirts are available in olive green. Women's V-neck shirts are available in black. The caps are black cotton twill.
