In 2020, this popular professional development course is being offered in the beautiful city of Reykjavík, Iceland. The course gives participants the exciting opportunity to see clinical social work—its theory, practice, and diversity—in a larger international arena, a vantage point that has become increasingly more important in our current global society. A large focus of the program will be on current social issues in Iceland and how these are being addressed by the professional social work community.

The classroom setting is transformed to the field where participants will visit a variety of clinical programs and dialogue on an informal level with clinical practitioners. The program includes site visits to several unique treatment programs in Iceland such as inpatient psychiatric facility, a program specializing in the forensic interviewing of children, and one focusing on interventions with victims of sexual violence, among others. The program will begin with a guided tour of Reykjavík and will also include a guided day trip on the Golden Triangle. Ample time will be provided throughout the week for independent sightseeing.

Course participants will be comfortably housed in single rooms at the CenterHotel Plaza, a centrally-located hotel which includes a full breakfast. Companions are welcome and will be invited to participate in all program events except visits to clinical programs.

Note that this is active program requiring a good bit of walking each day. We will use public transportation to travel to locations and participants will be expected to walk up to a half mile each way. The pace is moderate; however, you will encounter some uneven surfaces, stairs, and steps.

The program is led by Dina Wilke, PhD, MSW, Professor at the Florida State University College of Social Work in partnership with the Florida Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers.
