

Steve Puls

Steve Puls is a nationally accredited educator, professional developer, and program director. Steve has worked with thousands of teachers, administrators and other key stakeholders in creating turn-key solutions steeped in industry best practices to best meet the needs of customers. He has a keen sense of seeing the potential in people and derives satisfaction when they are successful in learning new skills, practices, and dispositions. He has delivered trainings and coached in numerous states, and has presented at countless conferences.

As an implementation manager focused on new methodologies and technologies, he has forged partnerships with Microsoft, eInstruction, and Qwizdom to use innovative tools and processes to work with diverse audiences in education. With over twenty-five years in academia, Steve has cultivated a wide variety of strategies and needs-based solutions that he openly shares with others through collaborative protocols. He has extensive experience onboarding new hires, and building effective teams.

Today, Steve serves as a Program Director with Communities In Schools of Wake County and The SMART Academy. In conjunction with Duke Energy, Biogen, and Cisco, Steve and the CIS Wake team is currently scaling and replicating technology-rich, STEM-based programming to build a pipeline of talent, for students to explore and be fully prepared for the future career opportunities of tomorrow.