

- Recession could cut almost 320,000 teaching positions – CEF member the Learning Policy Institute (LPI) today published a blog projecting the possible loss of almost 320,000 teaching positions due to the pandemic's impact on education revenues. LPI outlines the history of education job losses in the 2008 recession and, based on economic projections of cuts to education budgets of at least 10 percent this year and more than 20 percent next year, estimates possible teaching job losses by state. Assuming a 15 percent cut to states' education budgets and that their current education spending patterns continue, almost 320,000 teaching positions would be lost, with a handful of states losing close to 20 percent of existing teaching positions. The estimates provide very sobering examples of why additional federal education relief is so important.

Allen Pratt, Ed.D.
Executive Director
National Rural Education Association
615 McCallie Ave, Hunter Hall 205
Chattanooga, Tennessee 37403
423-667-2165 (Cell)
@NREA1 @PrattAllen

From: Sarah Abernathy <abernathy@cef.org>
Date: Thursday, April 30, 2020 at 12:13 PM
To: CEFMembersList <CEFMembersList@cef.org>
Subject: [EXT]: CEF Update: 4.30.20 - Congress, teaching job losses projected, Teacher Appreciation Week, events

External Email

Thursday, April 30, 2020

I. The Policy Intelligence and Education News

- Congressional outlook for action – The Senate will be back in session next week but the House changed its plan to resume in-person work and will not reconvene in Washington until later, although it plans for committees to restart hearings and oversight actions. Leaders in both chambers are discussing priorities for another coronavirus relief package but the Administration, Senate Republicans, and House Democrats do not agree on all that they want to include. Some of the contentious items already under discussion that could involve funding for education include:
  - Aid to state and local governments – Substantial support to backfill revenue shortfalls to state and local governments could help support education. The President initially had said he supported such relief but this week said it shouldn't go to sanctuary cities that do not help the federal government enforce immigration restrictions. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said earlier that instead of getting federal aid states should declare bankruptcy; he has since also said that any aid should be linked to waiving liability for employers as businesses reopen. The bipartisan National Governors Association and Democratic congressional leaders have discussed the need for more than $500 billion in aid for states, and localities have asked for another $250 billion. House Ways and Means Chairman Richard Neal (D-MA) will soon be unveiling a revenue-sharing plan possibly based on one that existed in the 1970s and early 1980s that provided population-based grants. It could use a formula similar to the one for Community Development Block Grants. Unrestricted aid to states and localities would help fill budget shortfalls that could dramatically impact public education funding at all levels.
  - Infrastructure – Leader McConnell has said he does not want infrastructure funding included in a pandemic response bill, but Administration and Democratic leaders see this type of investment as a spur to the economy. There has been an ongoing push to get school infrastructure and broadband funding into any such proposal. Federal funding for school modernization or education technology could help replace the need for those costs to be borne solely by state and local budgets, freeing up funding for other education needs, while also paying for construction workers in the near term.
- Recession could cut almost 320,000 teaching positions – CEF member the Learning Policy Institute \(LPI\) today published a blog projecting the possible loss of almost 320,000 teaching positions due to the pandemic's impact on education revenues. LPI outlines the history of education job losses in the 2008 recession and, based on economic projections of cuts to education budgets of at least 10 percent this year and more than 20 percent next year, estimates possible teaching job losses by state. Assuming a 15 percent cut to states' education budgets and that their current education spending patterns continue, almost 320,000 teaching positions would be lost, with a handful of states losing close to 20 percent of existing teaching positions. The estimates provide very sobering examples of why additional federal education relief is so important.

- House Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Subcommittee hearing on COVID-19 Response next week – On Wednesday, May 6, at 10am the House Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Subcommittee will be holding a hearing on COVID-19 Response; no witnesses are yet announced. The hearing will be webcast here.

II. Advocacy

- Next week is Teacher Appreciation Week – Next week is Teacher Appreciation Week. CEF member the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) has a "ThankAHero" social media campaign with ways to thank teachers, nurses, and public employees and a way to nominate one who could win a prize. (Honoring an important teacher is also a way to create a #HearOurEdStories video to share with your three Members of Congress as you urge them to increase education funding!)

III. Events

- CEF Friday Zoom meeting schedule –
  - Tomorrow - Friday, May 1 - No meeting during Congressional recess (this is a change from the original calendar).
  - Friday, May 8 – 9:30-11:00 a.m. Zoom meeting. Guest speaker: Bob Moran, Education Policy Director, Senate HELP Committee.
  - Friday, May 15 – 9:30-11:00 a.m. Zoom meeting. Guest speaker: Mark Laisch, Senate Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Subcommittee.
  - Friday, May 22 – 9:30-11:00 a.m. Zoom Research Briefing on educational technology. Details coming soon.
  - Friday, May 29 – No meeting.
- Sarah

Sarah Abernathy, Deputy Executive Director

1800 M Street, NW
Suite 500 South
Washington, DC 20036
T: 202-327-8125
abernathy@cef.org
www.cef.org

Twitter @edfunding

This message is not from a UTC.EDU address. Caution should be used in clicking links and downloading attachments from unknown senders or unexpected email.