How to Love Someone When You Think They're Wrong

I'm learning that loving people and being open to understanding their point of view comes with a price. Love isn't baking cookies for friends or writing encouraging notes. Love is uncomfortable, hard and sometimes painful because people are messy. We are called by God to give of ourselves and lean into the messiness so we can be proof of God's work on this earth.

But how?

Ask questions

In moments when I find myself in a conversation with someone and I'm thinking, "What is wrong with this person?" I find it helpful to ask questions like, "How did you come to believe that?"

Questions help us not to judge hastily.

Asking questions can help show a person you care about what they are saying and it will help you understand that person and their experience better.

Be filled with the Spirit

Before Jesus ascended into heaven, he told the disciples he would send a helper – the Holy Spirit – the third person of God. He told them to not try to share the Good News of salvation until the Holy Spirit came. We are not supposed to try to be reconcilers of man and God without the Spirit. So why would we try to love those who can be hard to love without Him?

Remember who you are

We are created uniquely for God's glory.

Consequently, you are no longer foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with God's people and also members of his household, built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, with Christ Jesus himself as the chief cornerstone. In him the whole building is joined together and rises to become a holy temple in the Lord. And in him you too are being built together to become a dwelling in which God lives by his Spirit. Ephesians 2:19-22

We are the body of Christ, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters. We are the reconciled and redeemed.

I recently learned that my idea of love was all wrong and it was very humbling. Some of you might be in the same boat. Pursue humility, putting others before yourself, in order to love people with Christ's love. Rely on and be filled with the Holy Spirit, because without Him we do not have the strength and power to succeed at loving others well. Finally, remember who you are and what Christ did for you. He loved you past the point where it was painful. Christ thought you were worthy of love, therefore love others.

Do not be anxious about anything, but in every situation, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God. And the peace of God, which transcends all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus.
