

Journey Lights Up the Night for a Family

Timothy Aiken's dream was something that you or I might take for granted. He simply wanted to take his family to the Speedway in Lights and out to eat. Mr. Aiken was receiving hospice services and his prognosis was not good. He had a very simple dream but it wasn't feasible for his family in their current circumstance. Journey was able to provide transportation for his family along with dinner, the Speedway entry fee and a stipend for their leisure activities.

When terminal illness consumes your life, the things you once took for granted are no longer possible physically and many times financially. The things that were once the norm, suddenly seem like a distant memory. This dream gave the Aiken family the opportunity to spend time together making memories as a family. We are very grateful for the opportunity to assist this family.
