Ask the Expert

My relationship is long past its expiration date simply because I don't know how to end it.

Begin with honest communication and feedback about why you need to end it. Stay respectful. Don't make it a blame game, but make it a learning experience so you both grow and are more skilled the next time around. Allow time to heal and for self discovery before you embark on a new relationship.

HIS DESIGN IN MIND

Are you so busy looking for the right person rather than being the right person? Somebody posted a question on social media - Would I date me? Would I want to be in a relationship with me? How do I begin the process of being the right person? It starts with self love and self value; seeing yourself through God's eyes, the way he sees you. Therein lies an integrity that is undeniable because GOD CAN'T LIE! The difference in who you are and who HE wants you to be is WHAT YOU DO!"

Be the person you want to attract. Be that man that honors God with his life; be that woman who is a good steward of God's resources - that includes good credit. All of us girls want that man who understands what it means to be a provider, but what man is going to trust you with his money if your credit score is minus 200? Your house and car is a disaster! You can't/won't cook! What woman is going to want you if you are still in development - you can't provide for her; still live with your mother or roommates. You have not sought God for the plan for your life. While I'm here, lets reiterate that God called her to be a help meet (Gen 2:18). Ladies I know you don't need a man, but he needs to be needed. Sir, she needs to be able to count on you. Keep your word. We all can stand to grow in that area. I know this sounds like traditional gender roles but we've strayed so far from the Word and God's intent for us. Where has that gotten us?

We won't even touch hygiene or grooming in this issue. Be that person who exhibits ALL of the fruits of the spirit especially self control and discipline. In your season of singleness seek your purpose; work on being what you want and in doing so to the glory of God! What can you change about you to make yourself better?
