The #1 complaint from families is puppy chewing & biting. Most weather through this tough period. A handful don't and give up on their puppy, which is very sad to me. This is a lifelong commitment; puppies should not be discarded like an old toy. This stage is controllable but it can be tough, it requires a combination of training for the pup as well as for the owners. Puppy teeth can hurt A LOT. Irish Setters grow quickly and don't always understand their size or strength. This is a training issue and requires patience from you. Is this something you are willing to weather through? If not, please don't send me this application. I want the best possible homes for my puppies which is why I ask so many questions. Please share your thoughts or experiences with me and tell me why your home would be a good "Forever Home" for one of our puppies.

I understand that raising a puppy has its challenges and still want to be considered for a puppy!
