Scottsdale shifts photo enforcement locations based on speed and crash data

Speeding and red-light cameras work in tandem to improve safety – a fact well-supported in Scottsdale and why the city will deactivate two locations and add four new intersection safety cameras next month. Photo enforcement systems on Thomas Road eastbound at Hayden Road and McDowell Road eastbound at Scottsdale Road will be deactivated.

Four new systems will be activated Friday, March 1: - Scottsdale Road southbound at Pinnacle Peak Road - Shea Boulevard westbound at 92nd Street - Frank Lloyd Wright westbound at Greenway-Hayden Loop - Indian School Road westbound at Hayden Road Choosing which locations no longer needed photo enforcement, and selecting new locations was a data-based decision made after city traffic engineers analyzed an aggregate of collision, red light/speeding violations, collision severity and traffic volume data.
