CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

No worship services right now due to coronavirus. We'll keep you posted!

Pray for our church

Church members last gathered for an annual meeting at the end of January 2020, voting to spend up to $1.5 million to build a multi-purpose facility on the church property at Scottwood and Pearson Roads.

It's been a long year and difficult to move forward; church leaders are still debating various options and will soon be querying members once again for their input.

Please pray for our church and church leaders as we strive to discern and carry out God's will.

Many are the plans in the mind of a man, but it is the purpose of the Lord that will stand.

Proverbs 19:21

While Sunday mornings are different these days, many of us have discovered joy in still worshipping God together—and we do it from our living room sofa!

Like many of you, we've sampled a variety of online church services. Our favorite is from All Saints Presbyterian (PCA) in Meridian, Idaho. The pastor preaches a heartfelt message focused on God's word. You can watch it "live" on YouTube at 9 am (our time) or a recorded version: <https://allsaintspca.org/>

In the February issue, we shared that many are also enjoying the worship locally at EV Free Church on Pentz Road.

While we can download the bulletin and sing along with the hymns, we found ourselves missing the blessing of sharing communion. But Amazon.com came to the rescue: Mark bought us a portable communion set for under $35 and we're now able to join in with online worship even more fully.

Our church is experimenting with watching sermons online these days. David Swanson has offered a couple of options—Zoom and Vimeo—and has shared a sample sermon with church members and friends. We'll keep you posted with future opportunities to worship God as a dispersed and Covid-aware congregation.
