A large informational poster or display board with various images and text, likely related to the AMPS event. It features several small photographs of armor models and descriptive text.

A table covered with a white cloth, displaying various armor models, informational materials, and a water dispenser. The models are arranged in rows, and there are several brochures and pamphlets scattered on the table. A water dispenser is visible on the right side of the table.

The display board is divided into several sections. At the top left, there is an American flag and a circular logo. Below this, there are several columns of text, some accompanied by small images of military equipment or personnel. A map is visible in the middle section. On the right side of the board, there are several small, square images arranged vertically. At the bottom left, there is a larger rectangular panel with text and a logo, possibly a certificate or a specific report.

A table in the background, partially obscured by the main display table. It has a white tablecloth and holds a white paper bag, a white cup, and some other small items. The table is positioned against a brick wall.
