Lake County DFL Hosts Forum on Climate Change

By Kitty Mayo

Members of the Two Harbors chapter of Citizens Climate Lobby made a presentation that focused largely on the intervention of carbon pricing for the Lake County DFL on Monday, November 15th.

In the introduction made by Todd Redmann, chair of the Lake County DFL, Redmann noted that a recent survey of DFL members put climate change at the top of their priority list, prompting the forum to generate discussion.

Katya Gordon, Two Harbors resident and CCL member, presented an overview of the need for action, citing an increase in severe weather events and the erosion of cold weather temperatures in the northland as already noticeable impacts.

Gordon also introduced the CCL as a volunteer organization “learning how to talk to our government about what we want, and to build political will for a liveable world.” She stated that the knowledge and technology already exist to make large scale changes, but that the missing element is governmental decisions.

Explaining the concept of carbon pricing, Gordon detailed the approach as one in which extractors of fossil fuels would be charged a fee per ton of fossil fuel that they extract from the earth. In this approach, the fees would be distributed as dividends to all citizens, much like the Alaskan oil dividends.

“It is a bipartisan supported approach because it is market-based, not a tax or regulation,” said Gordon.

Gordon said that much research has already been done on the topic, and that all the developed countries of the world already use this system: except for the U.S. and Australia.

Another CCL member, Mike Overend, made a presentation showing the many possibilities for making climate change solutions. Options included renewable energies, energy efficient buildings, afforestation, and new technologies like carbon capture.

However, Overend said, carbon pricing would have a major impact. “Carbon pricing is the single best thing we can do and it pays for itself, it makes everybody part of the solution,” said Overend, adding that it is not a silver bullet and that other measures are still needed to be effective.
