

Cubist

This 3D puzzle covers all 6 sides of a cube where each face is a 5 x 5 grid. Here it is presented in 2D where the topmost 5x5 grid is the 'Top', and below that is the 'Front', then to the left of that is the 'Left Side', etc.

Clues and answers in this puzzle are in sets such that together the final set of characters to be entered onto the cube will be 20 spaces long and will begin at one square (indicated by the thick black line) and go completely round the cube ending back at the starting point. Therefore all vertical entries in the 'Right' and 'Back' sides will proceed from bottom to top and horizontal entries on the 'Top' will go from right to left.

There are 15 such sets of word strings in this puzzle and each string will be made up of from 3 to 5 answer words.

These answer words are from 3 to 9 letters long and of these, 11 are capitalized and 2 are abbreviations.

Similarly the clues are a combination of 3 to 5 typical cryptic clues combined into one long 'sentence' and the solver is to determine where one clue ends and the next starts within each sentence.

The punctuation may or may not divide the clues properly.

For 9 of the strings, one letter needs to be removed first. These 9 letters taken in order from top to bottom will spell out the name of one of the world's most famous Cubists

These clues start on the 'right' side (the right of the bar) and go across the back, the left side and the front, ending up on the right again
