

Brown Residence

JB Fieldworks collaborated with Studio B Architecture to develop a home that seamlessly blends the inside and out.

Circulation, views and materials work in harmony to make full use of all the available space this small in-town lot affords. Poured concrete walls extend into the landscape creating outdoor rooms that provide both gathering space and framed vignettes for the occupants of the home.

Water is used to celebrate both vertical and horizontal circulation both inside and out. A simple palate of native plants were used to compliment the architecture. A roof-top garden provides spectacular views of the Flatirons and a peaceful retreat for the owners.
