

THE SELECTED US PRESIDENTS

COMPREHENSIVE TIMELINE OF US PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION PATTERNS 1988-2012

The purpose of this illustration is to present a very simplistic hypothesis. The hypotheses will be based on the Day-Count association of 2 established dates/events to postulate a possible 3rd Date. The 2 established Dates are the 41-Day count of Operation Desert Storm and the 43-Day count of the Iraqi Military Invasion. The hypotheses is based on the following criteria: The Number Order of the U.S. Presidents (41st and 43rd) since 1988 seem to be associated to the Gulf War. The (41-Day and 43-Day) counts of the conflicts seem to correspond to the number order of the US Presidents in direct relationship to those wars. 3) The US Presidents since 1988, seem to have been Elected from the alternating Political Party. 4) There seems to be an exact 4444-Day count from the first 41-day Gulf War to the 43-day Gulf War. The 4444-Day count from the 1st 41-Days to the 2nd 43-Days will be used as 1 Measure. When projected onto the next sequence of years since the 43-Day count of Gulf War 2, the Measure produces the date of May 20, 2015. Within this timeframe, if the Pattern holds, it produces a '45' Number factor. This 45 number coefficient could allude to the next possible US President, being the 45th after Obama, the 44th US President. If one adds then the 45-Day count to the May 20, 2015 date, you surprisingly end up on July 4th, 2015. These correlations thus contribute to the hypothesis that a projected and future 45-Day count will also then correlate to the 45th US President—thus a 41-43-45 Pattern. This hypothesis is pure speculation an not intended to anticipate a political/voter result of who the next US President beyond 2016. Nonetheless, if this number order of the US Presidents to Gulf War day-count pattern is reliable then the following could be true. The current US President Obama may be re-elected. May 20, 2015 promises to be a very significant and historical date for the USA.

- IF the (41-Days and 43-Days) Pattern also corresponds to the US President's Order with the duration in Days of the Gulf War they were used to sanction and initiate; then the 41-Days = Bush I and 43-Days = Bush II.
- IF 41-Days corresponds to the 41st President and the 43-Days corresponds to the 43rd President, THEN possibly, the next 45-Days = the 45th US President and next US military campaign within the USA/Middle East.
- IF the 41-Days and 43-Days denotes the amount of Days the US Military operations/campaigns lasted during the 1st and 2nd Gulf Wars, then the 3rd coefficient would be a future US Military Campaign of 45-Days.

THE SAME 2 PARTY SET-UP

Gallup reports that President Obama had a 50% or more approval rating in 2011 in only 10 states, plus the District of Columbia -- all blue states. In his 10 worst states, Obama's average approval ratings were 36.5% or lower -- in the Republican red states. Unless there is another US Military War / 'Conflict' in the Spring/ or Summer of 2012 in which the US Populace will 'rally' around, Obama does not seem to be re-electable taking into account the current economic trends.

With the value of the US Dollar continuing to slide and its purchasing power diminishing, the numbers in the AP/GfK Poll show an Electorate that is still not happy with the direction that the USA is going in. Of those polled, 62% said that the country is going in the wrong direction. This is a 5 point increase since the last poll was taken. Of those surveyed, 90% of respondents said that the economy is the most important item for the US Presidential Elections.
