Letter to his daughter

JULY 26, 1862

Washington D.C. July 24/1862
My beloved daughter,

When do you stop this morning - I am out to office writing and have not yet seen like you. Consequently I may not look upon the prints you write me about in York - I want you to do by brother that brother was her to buy for your own shoes, pair of open work prints. I promise deep that you can now with ease and safety, I do not want brother to meet the deep but let some deeps might do the work - I get why this morning and walk to park back. Note on the blue paper and through I think like to see my daughter on how strong the her feel as much about seeing with me, but then I thought the no any more with her power loving and beloved brother and brother - I do wish I could fly away home and see my dear ones - I hope you will have good time the vacation - you can visit me about your opportunity in your next letter - I now expect to be again into the branches of the minister some time next week - I trust you do give your precious brother lots of love and hugs for me - I suppose you do all you can to make brother happy - I can not write more now - but my dear daughter your father sends more for you than he can make - I am your loving parent of David

Ladd letter of Honor

Lowell May 2. 1861

Major Ladd }
Dear Sir }

Will you please accept the accompanying epaulettes as a slight expression of the high regard in which you are held by the commissioned officers undersigned. It is our sincere desire that these epaulettes will always be as bright as the honor of the man who wears them, but we ~~are~~ knowfull well that while the storm and confusion of battle will dim their lustre, the bright shining honor of the wearer will never be obscured or blenished. With great respect we subscribe ourselves your most
