This letter is to certify that Shan-Lee Liu has successfully completed 75 hours of online professional development through the Adobe Education Exchange and has been awarded the Adobe Education Trainer credential.

An “Adobe Education Trainer” is an individual that a) provides training on Adobe tools and solutions to individuals and institutions in the education space and b) who maintains high standards for reach and quality by meeting or exceeding the requirements for the program as outlined here: <http://edex.adobe.com/professional-development/trainers/>

In order to earn this credential, the bearer of this letter was required to complete a ten-week, online “Train the Trainer” course. The online course was designed to equip participants with the knowledge, skills, and tools to design and deliver effective Adobe professional development sessions to K12 and Higher Education teachers, faculty and staff. The strategies and tips within this course are designed to make Adobe products accessible to all learners in every classroom.

By successfully completing this online “Train the Trainer” course, Adobe Education Trainers have demonstrated that they are able to:

- Clearly and effectively communicate practical, approachable and engaging tips for using Adobe’s products, tools and services for teaching and learning
- Leverage key cross-curricular themes in education -- such as creativity, digital media and visual storytelling – to inspire and engage educators
- Implement best practices in adult learning theory for technology integration training
- Apply strategies to design and deliver effective professional learning
- Support cross-curricular educators from the primary to higher education level in using Adobe products to engage all learners and meet their teaching and learning goals

The course ran from July 21st through October 21st, 2013. The course requirements were as follows:

- Review of weekly readings, recordings and other background building materials
- Participation in a weekly webinar, hosted via Adobe Connect (optional)
- Submission of weekly homework assignments
- Review of peer work and thoughtful participation in online discussions with other participants
- Successful completion of an end-of-course project-based assessment

As a credentialed Adobe Education Trainer, Shan-Lee Liu has joined an elite group of highly qualified professional development providers. Adobe is pleased to congratulate our first cohort of Adobe Education Trainers on their accomplishment.
