Angel of God Resource Center, a Chicago not-for-profit organization focused on employment training, job placement, and career development is pleased to announce the launch of its new Emma Johnson Conner Scholarship.

According to Annie Smith, AOGRC Executive Officer, "The scholarship honors a woman who valued education, however, was unable to complete her own due to raising her younger siblings as a teenager, following the death of their Mother." This trend of nurturing and nursing others would continue for most of her life. Emma Johnson Conner not only provided care for the sick person, she also provided any other needed help, and cooking for the entire family.

Smith adds, “ Her form of nursing was done without an educational background, however, her “patients “appeared to thrive within her natural skills which included lots of hugs and smiles”.

The Angel of God Resource Center is celebrating 10 years of providing job training, and placement for low income families, persons with disabilities, the unemployed, veterans, as well as those who may be underemployed. Smith says that, “ her mission, and that of Angel of God Resource Center is to assist with the progression of building a stronger community through education and training “. Ms. Smith , “also stresses that a community service goal has always been at the core of Angel of God Resource Center’s commitment to the Chicago community”.
