Description

---

The Journal of Social Science and Allied Health Professions provides an international and interdisciplinary forum for the dissemination of social science research within the allied health professions. We welcome original research articles (both empirical and theoretical), reviews, position papers and commentaries on health and practitioner issues, which can inform current research, policy and practice in all areas of common interest to the healthcare professions. The journal also welcomes material relevant to any aspect of health from a wide range of social science disciplines (anthropology, economics, epidemiology, geography, social policy, psychology and sociology) and mental health, healthcare, clinical practice and health policy. We encourage material which is of general interest to a national and international readership.

Types of Publication

The journal publishes the following types of publication

- Peer-reviewed original research articles and critical or analytical reviews in all areas of the allied health professions. These papers may be up to 6,000 words including abstract, tables, and references as well as the main text.
- Peer-reviewed short reports, pilot studies of research findings on topical issues or published articles of between 2000 and 4000 words.
- Conference posters for wider dissemination.

Impact Factor?

---

The Journal of Social Science and Allied Health Professions does not have an impact factor.

Abstract/Paper

When submitting to the journal it is important to conform to the following:

Abstract – The abstract should consist of up to 300 words and must be included in the submission. It should be presented separately from the paper. It should clearly state the purpose and setting of the research, the methods, principle findings, conclusions and advances in knowledge. It can be broken down as followed:

- Purpose
- Methods and Materials
- Results/Findings
- Conclusions
- Advances in Knowledge

Paper – The paper should not exceed 6,000 words. The journal does not conform to particular theoretical position thus welcoming qualitative and quantitative approaches. It is important that the paper is proof read prior to submission. The journal accepts reflective/reflexive articles thus first person is acceptable. We do however request that where possible manuscripts are written in the third person. Graphs, figures and tables can be presented within the manuscript. Other file formats such as DICOM files can be sent along with the submission.

Reference formatting – Please ensure that every reference cited in the text is also presented within the reference list (and vice versa). We request that reference lists follow Vancouver style.

Key Message

---

We request that authors present a key message within their manuscript. This will help editors, reviewers and readers identify the primary purpose of the article.

Copyright

As a journal we do not hold any copyright over your work. If you choose to publish with us you are also free to publish elsewhere. Authors are also required to secure permission to reproduce copyrighted material(s) in their submitted papers.
