Melampodium Leucanthum
“Blackfoot Daisy”

Adorably covered in showy white daisy flowers from March through November, this southwest native is a treasure in the garden. Evergreen to 18 degrees and growing an average of 8 inches tall by 2 feet wide, it thrives in full sun to filtered shade. Needing little water and good draining soil to keep it happy and full, making it a perfect choice for borders, rock gardens and filling in small spaces for xeriscaping. Sharing a light honey scent when the blooms warm in the morning, it attracts many butterflies. You cannot help but enjoy this dainty beauty.
