Early Marshall Mitchell Music

Marshall was born and raised in Texas. A $13 Silvertone guitar from Western Auto and four Johnny Cash Albums were the fodder that fueled his musical beginnings. While in high school, he performed locally at churches, private parties, dances and hootenannies. After graduation he served in the Marine Corps, then traveled around the country, performing solo and with various musical groups at a variety of venues and opening concerts for headliners.

After settling in Northwest Arkansas, Marshall formed Marshall Mitchell and the Rockville Rangers. The trio performed at festivals, clubs, and private parties locally and across Arkansas.

Educating Kids Through Cowboy Music

Currently, Marshall's main performing focus is educating children through cowboy music. His Cowboy Music for Kids show emphasizes character traits and is available for schools, libraries, museums, and other public venues. He tours in several states and thousands of children have attended his performances. The show's indoor stage set includes a western backdrop, covered wagon, campfire, cactus, and Marshall's trusty sidekicks. As he sings the songs and tells the cowboy stories, the audience rides the dusty trail along with him.

Marshall also performs as a solo artist at private events, house concerts, lodges, retirement communities, festivals, and other large and small venues.

His stage presence is proof positive...he is a seasoned performer, a singer/songwriter, a guitar man, and he strives to make every show a top-shelf performance.

Marshall Mitchell performances include a heavy dose of original songs along with a mix of select cover songs; from classic country, folk, old time rock-n-roll and some handpicked blues. He can tailor a performance for specific audiences. A multi-faceted artist, he writes, records, engineers and produces his recordings at the Marshall's Office in Springdale.

Marshall also wrote a collection of watershed songs for a local watershed partnership's Clean Water Raingers Program, and performs the program regionally for students.
