

K.P. Gresham

Professional Character Assassin

Author Quote: I'm just a preacher's kid who writes stories, kills people and loves baseball.

What's my style? Think Susan Wittig Albert meets Tom Clancy

Author Bio

K.P. Gresham, author of the Pastor Matt Hayden Mystery series and Three Days at Wrigley Field, moved to Texas as quick as she could. Born a Chicagoan, K.P. and her husband moved to Houston, fell in love with not shoveling snow and are 30+ year Lone Star State residents. She finds that her dual country citizenship, the Midwest and Texas, provides deep fodder for her award-winning novels. Her varied careers as a media librarian and technical director, middle school literature teacher and theatre playwright and director add humor and truth to her stories. A graduate of Houston's Rice University Novels Writing Colloquium, K.P. now resides in Austin, Texas, where life with her tolerant but supportive husband and narcissistic Chihuahua is acceptably weird.

Q & A with the Author

Q: Do you want each book to stand on its own, or are you trying to build a body of work with connections between each book?

Yes and Yes. Even though my Pastor Matt Hayden Mystery Series builds connections within the series story arc, I can't assume that the reader will always start at book one. Its important to make each book in the series deliver a fully developed and fully satisfying experience for each reader.

Having said that, I also enjoy writing stand-alones—specifically when there is something in our culture that calls me to talk about a specific situation. In Three Days at Wrigley Field, I needed to respond to my eight-year-old daughter's question, "Why can't girls play professional baseball?"

Q: What do you owe the real upon whom you base your characters?

For some of the folks I write about, their characters are my thank you to the incredible impression they left on me, whether it be their humor, their grace, their strength, their faith.

For other folks, yes, they left an impression on me as well. Unfortunately for them, their characters get based on their egos, their rude behaviors, and their judgmental loathing of those who are different than they are. And thank God, there are people different than they are.

Q: How do you deal with writer's block?

Writer's block would be a problem for me IF I didn't have two stories going at the same time. Here's how that works for me. I write on Book A until I hit a wall. (I find I hit a wall when I've written something "not right". It's like my subconscious says, "No way, honey. This is the wrong path.") Then I write on Book B. It's like a breath of fresh air--I'm excited to be with these characters again, back in this plot again, etc. Eventually I will hit a wall in story B, and I go back to Book A. When writing on the other story my brain usually figures out what's needed with Book A. It's so much easier to see the forest through the trees when I've been away from the story for a little while.

Q: If you could tell your younger writing self anything, what would it be?

Hey, kid. You know love writing. You know you're good at it. Believe in yourself. Now learn your craft.

Brief Synopsis

The Preacher's First Murder. He was a good cop until he ran into a bad one. Then, to save what was left of his family and his sanity, Michael Hogan, Jr., entered the Fed's Witness Protection Program and became Pastor Matthew Hayden.

Just out of seminary, Matt takes a church in rural Texas, expecting peace, quiet and a good dose of humility. What he finds is a town ruled by the past and an old woman murdered. To make matters worse, the dead woman's daughter, Angie O'Day, runs the town's Ice House and is truly an angel by day and a devil by night.

Matt might be a man of God now, but he is still a man.

When the second body is discovered and accusations are levied at the innocent Angie, Matt puts on an old hat--his cop's hat--and discovers the buried secrets of Wilks, Texas.

Brief Synopsis:

He was a good cop until he ran into a bad one. Then, to save what was left of his family and his sanity, Michael Hogan, Jr., entered the Fed's Witness Protection Program and became Pastor Matthew Hayden. Wilks, Texas, is not the peaceful, small town that Pastor Matt Hayden had envisioned as the perfect place for him to hide from those who want to kill him. A former cop who holds incriminating evidence against his former Chief of Police, Matt has chosen a path of peace and meditation to quiet the rage that lives inside of him. When the remains of a beautiful barrel racer missing for years are discovered next to his church, the town is in shock, but Matt feels nothing other than the desire to bring comfort to his grieving congregation. Then a church member, with the same build and coloring as Matt, is shot in the church's sanctuary. Matt begins to suspect that his cover has been compromised—and that his former boss's thugs have killed the wrong man. Although he is a man of God now, he is still a man. And it looks like someone wants this man dead.

Brief Synopsis:

Mike Hogan, former undercover cop who worked the Miami drug scene, wakes up in a hospital ICU in Austin, Texas. Not only is he missing part of his skull, he is missing four years of memories. In those four years he learns he's become a pastor, taken a church in rural Texas, and fallen in love with the beguiling, red-headed owner of the town's local bar.

At least he remembers why he's on the run in the Fed's Witness Protection Program. Howard Rutledge, former Chief of Police in Miami has killed Mike's father and brother, and wants Mike dead too. Mike's testimony could put Rutledge in jail for racketeering, smuggling, and murder. When Mike wakes up in that ICU, he can only assume that Rutledge has found him.

Mike is helpless with a broken body and an unsettled mind. Who are his friends and who are his foes? Can he trust the kindly sheriff who has hired security to guard him? Can he trust the woman whom his soul remembers but his brain does not? Who in this unfamiliar world is his assassin?

Mike Hogan must stay alive to put Rutledge away, and the hole in his head and his piecemeal memory are not going to stop him.

"Any team can have a bad century."
(Jack Brickhouse, Chicago Cubs TV Announcer, 1948-81)

Which is more important, tradition or victory? Rachel Caravetti, a star athlete with gaps in her past, pushes professional baseball to answer that question. She has the pitch to win.

Does baseball have the guts to hire her?

The owner of the Chicago Cubs is dying of cancer. He is desperate for his team to make it into the World Series, but the team's relief pitching is hurting. Kevin Boswell, the slumping ace pitcher, stands to lose his job if Rachel succeeds; he is also the only man Rachel has ever loved. To what lengths will the devious manager of the Cubs, the commissioner of baseball and Mike's scheming granddaughter go to keep Rachel out of professional baseball?

The beloved "Friendly Confines" cradles the last dreams of a dying man and the struggling romance between two people who love baseball as much as they love each other. On its pitcher's mound, Rachel faces her deepest fear and learns that her biggest challenge has nothing to do with baseball.
