

To take a guided tour with a combat veteran is to get a different view of the battle, a soldier's perspective, someone who has been there and done it. You will get an insight into how a young man in combat would feel, his worries, his fears and his reactions to war. I have talked to veterans on their level. I have read their stories and also watched the interviews of many WW2 heroes and know how they must have felt, as I have tasted battle, endured the hardship of war and returned with scars.
