"Flying Fortress"
(U.S. ARMY AIRCORP)
PILT-FRTSS

Used by USAAF pilots in WW2, each bag sports genuine aircraft silhouettes and a replica squadron patch. In addition, each bag has a reproduction "Blood-Chit" patch featuring the flag of a friendly nation. "Blood Chit" patches were used by pilots, shot down in enemy territory, to identify them as friendly to civilians and requesting their assistance. This "chit" was carried by Allied forces flying over South East Asia.
