BAPTISM PROTECTS CHRISTIANS FROM THE DEVIL

In the Catholic Church, only bishops or priests given permission by bishops can undertake a major exorcism to liberate a person from demonic possession. In this way, the full weight of the Church and the power of Jesus Christ acting in the person of the priest or bishop is a force that overcomes the devil.

In recent years, laypeople have become an important part of this ministry to drive out demons from people and places. Exorcists assemble a team that usually includes medical professionals to discern between spiritual and psychological issues and laypeople to offer prayer and physical support.

Msgr. Stephen Rossetti is president and founder of the St. Michael Center for Spiritual Renewal, stated, "The old days of the exorcist working alone are gone," "We work in a team with laity, deacons and priests."

Possessed individuals have superhuman strength, according to him, so having people to restrain them when necessary is important.

"I've seen an 80-pound woman lift up a 200-pound man," Msgr. Esseff said. "I've seen the damage that can be done if you don't have people to hold them down. There are those kinds of people, and those who pray — and also psychiatrists. Each one uses his or her gift against this enemy of mankind, and together there's tremendous power against Satan."

It is important to emphasize that generally, and leading a sacramental life is the best protection.

Dr. Richard Gallagher, an Ivy League-trained psychiatrist with a private practice in Westchester County, New York, explained, he is regularly called upon by a network of exorcists across the country to help evaluate and advise on cases and occasionally to be present at exorcisms.

"The first exorcist-priest asked for my help in assessing a severe oppression," he said, "then many others later asked for my professional assessments of large numbers of suspected — and sometimes false — cases of possessions, as well. I have, undoubtedly, seen more such genuine cases than any physician in the world and probably in history."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

President Abraham Lincoln continued in this belief in an intervening Providence: "If it were not for my firm belief in an overruling Providence, it would be difficult for me, in the midst of such complications of affairs, to keep my reason on its seat. But, I am confident that the Almighty has His plans, and will work them out; and whether we see it or not, they will be the best for us."

Providence: The protective care of God.
