Celebrating With Chocolate

"Exercise is a dirty word. Every time I hear it, I wash my mouth out with chocolate."

— Charles M. Schulz

By N.L. Preston

It's July and time to celebrate Independence Day. Seems appropriate this year more than ever after long days of self-isolating in our homes. Red, White, and Boom, our annual fireworks with thousands in attendance, is canceled and there will be a televised four-day event looking back at 39 years of former fireworks and festivities on the 4th. Not quite the same which is the norm for our daily lives these days. Oh well. We have learned to adjust our definition of normal from day to day as need arises.

Fun fact. It's National Anti-Boredom Month. How ironic, considering some of us have been bored beyond tears for the last several months. My husband, Robert, and I cleaned, organized, played cards, binge watched TV, and ate junk food with no remorse. As our girths expanded, our guilt lessened, and exercise receded to the back burner. That's what happens when one is confined to home with no casinos or bingo for entertainment. Playing two handed canasta doesn't cut it when you're used to the singing of slot machines and the sight of bouncing bingo balls. The good news is that as I write this column in May, we had just received a text from our local bingo that it would be reopening soon; probably same time as casinos and hair salons. My hair hasn't been this long, shaggy, and unkempt since forever ago. I briefly considered taking a selfie every morning and posting it online to give everyone a good laugh. My better judgement kicked in when I realized that what others see, they can never un-see. My hideous hair would be forever enshrined on the pages of Facebook and haunt me for years to come. I must say though that my Robert became a good-looking devil with longer hair that was suddenly curly. Yet again, many men as they age look better and better while some women, such as myself, could use a time genie to turn back the clock a few years.

Even though there's no fireworks this year, there is something to celebrate come July 7th. It's World Chocolate Day around the globe and a perfect excuse to indulge our chocolate cravings. I need to point out though that in the United States October 28 is recognized as National Chocolate Day. No problem because as Hillary Clinton once famously said, "What difference does it make?" I've decided to gorge on chocolate both days. Dark chocolate is good for my health and any kind of chocolate will cheer up this chocoholic as we all recover, endure, and learn new methods of coping with the Covid-19 virus.

And speaking of chocolate, try this yummy recipe. Put a gob of peanut butter between two slices of banana, dip it in melting chocolate, and let it harden. Sweet deliciousness ensues. I have to confess though that I did end up with hardened chocolate on my hands at my first attempt to make these. But again, quoting Hillary, did it really matter that I ended up with chocolate hands? Not to me as I gleefully licked my chocolate coated fingers. Until next month, may Lady Luck blow you kisses as you dance out the door with your gambling dollars. Win big.

Lucky Lotto News

Carolina Cash

James Joyce of Greensboro, North Carolina, is a healthcare driver who delivers medication to area hospitals and clinics. Each day after completing his route, Joyce would buy a Cash 5 ticket with EZ Match on his way home. The routine finally paid off when he recently discovered that he was the winner of the $149,814 Carolina Cash 5 jackpot. "I almost fainted," Joyce said of his win. Joyce took advantage of the temporary claims process that allowed him to claim his prize—$105,994 after taxes—from home via mail. He said he plans to use the money to pay off bills and treat himself to a new set of golf clubs.

Patience Rewarded

A Virginia Lottery player waiting to cash a $1,000 winning lottery ticket wound up winning an additional $177,777 before collecting his prize. Jeff Melick, a landscaper residing in Newport News, was waiting until the lottery's customer service centers reopened to cash in his $1,000 winning scratch-off ticket when he purchased a Lucky 7s Tripler ticket. The ticket turned out to be a top prize winner. "I kind of went numb," Melick later said. "I was doing good with the $1,000." Melick said he plans to "pay it forward" with some of the winnings, surprising a few strangers by paying their bills at a local convenience store.

Pot O' Gold Bingo Has Closed

Pot O' Gold Bingo Hall has closed its doors as of May 31st, 2020 and will not re-open. This fun Bingo hall located in Arden Hills on the outskirts of St. Paul offered Bingo every single day, and the place got pretty packed with all types of players. Serious Bingo players and casual players enjoyed playing alongside each other each day with eager anticipation of winning that pot of gold! Longtime manager Frank is calling it quits and moving to Florida for a well-deserved retirement. So long and farewell to a great longstanding Bingo Hall!

Player Calls Cops on Hall Capacity

Upton Bingo in Cape Coral, Florida, got an unexpected visit from the police after reopening under the governor’s post-Coronavirus phase-one plan, which allowed the Bingo hall to operate at 25-percent capacity. At full capacity, the hall seated 473 people. That meant that under the plan, 118 people were allowed in the hall. When it was revealed that there were actually 133 people there (15 more than the 25-percent limit) someone called foul and then called law enforcement. Police arrived, inspected the hall, observed that the owners were following all phase-one safety guidelines and approved the slightly oversized occupant number without issuing a citation.

Zoom Bingo

As cities continue to take proactive measures to slow the spread of the coronavirus, more Americans are working remotely. Consequently, videoconferencing tools like Zoom and Microsoft Teams have become a normal part of the new telecommute workday for tens of millions of people. And these video conferencing tools aren’t just for the home office; they are also good for virtual gameplay with friends and family. There are innumerable games available. Among them: Bingo—currently one of the more popular video conference games because it transitions well to the virtual setting and is conducive to both small and large groups.

It’s easy to craft Bingo cards at home, there are online number generators to help streamline the process, and some apps provide a recap of numbers already called to minimize confusion.

Feel Good Bingo

This spring, a workgroup from Communities That Care (CTC) Marinette and Menominee counties, Michigan, came up with a new way to promote health during stay-at-home orders: Communities That Care - Feel Good Bingo. Participants downloaded a Bingo card online and did activities designed to promote mental, physical and emotional health as outlined on the card. As players completed lines on the card, they were entered in prize drawings. CTC guides communities through a proven five-phase change process. Using prevention science as its base, CTC promotes healthy youth development, improves youth outcomes, and reduces problem behaviors.

Parking Lot Bingo

Masonic Lodge 289 in Grand Rapids, Ohio, has been sponsoring a social-distancing community Bingo event twice a week in a parking lot in downtown Grand Rapids. Players park in the lot and play Bingo for free from their car seats as the caller sits in a van and calls the numbers over a loudspeaker. Winners signal Bingo by honking their car horns. Prizes are candy bars, delivered from a safe distance using a six-foot gripping wand.

VA’s Emergency Preparedness

The Department of Veterans Affairs has a disaster preparedness team called the Disaster Emergency Medical Personnel System (DEMPS). Part of DEMPS is the National Emergency Medical Response Teams: medical and nonmedical volunteers on call for two months at a time who are able to deploy within 48 hours. Whether it’s a flood, earthquake or other natural disaster, once a Presidential Declaration is issued the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) or the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) jump in. That’s when the VA’s DEMPS programs can be activated.

The VA isn’t just helping veterans during this coronavirus crisis. Per its fourth mission (to support the country in emergencies), the VA started up its 3D printing network to test designs of medical equipment. Along with the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), it’s creating 3D prototypes of face shields, masks and ventilators. Additionally, at the request of FEMA, the VA has made 1,500 beds available across the country for nonveterans who need acute and intensive care. In some places it’s sent additional medical staff to state veterans homes, given clinical support to the homeless, loaned a pharmacy trailer to a medical center and built a hospital with 1,000 beds. As of this writing, DEMPS has moved into Louisiana to help with the explosion of coronavirus cases, and the VA is seeking medical professionals to help with intensive care units as well as biomedical technicians with ventilator experience. If you have a nonessential medical need, call your VA facility and talk to them. You might decide to postpone your visit for a little while. Or perhaps you can be seen via Telehealth, either on your tablet or computer.

The Game that Gives Back

Dear Aunt Bingo:

It had been months and months since I last won a Bingo, and as you can guess I was pretty unhappy about it.

The most recent time I went to Bingo I stood at the back door of my house with my car keys in my hand and for at least 10 minutes debated with myself about whether I should even go.

In the end I decided to go, figuring my luck would have to change soon...maybe tonight. But of course, when I got there, I was already cranky, my cards stunk, and everyone around me seemed to be hitting Bingo in 10 numbers or less. It felt like such a huge waste of time and money.

During the first break, the caller alerted the players that there was going to be some sort of an announcement and asked if all of us could return to our seats as soon as possible. After a few more minutes everybody had settled down and the caller asked if the Bingo director, his deputies and the other volunteers would gather by the caller platform.

After all the workers were there, the caller stepped down from the platform and stood by a table to the side. Sitting at the table I could see a group I hadn't noticed until now, made up of several young people and some adults I assumed were their parents.

The caller introduced them as representatives from a civic group that received funding through the money raised at Bingo. He went on to name a dozen or so other organizations that also received funding from Bingo and reminded everyone in the hall that this is why his organization sponsors the games.

After that, the caller handed the mike to a girl at the table, and she stood up and gave a short, thoughtful speech thanking the folks running the Bingo for their support. She then presented the Bingo director with a plaque and the players gave the director, caller and workers a round of applause. After that, the director took the microphone and thanked the girl, then turned to the players and thanked all of us for spending the dollars which they used to fund so many groups in need.

It was a very nice little event that only took a few minutes, but I'm sure did a lot of good for the players and the volunteers in the hall. Like me, there were surely plenty of grumpy people there that night who were unhappy with their lack of winnings. But seeing that young girl representing her organization and expressing appreciation for the Bingo hall's—and our—support did so much to boost our spirits and remind us all what charity Bingo is for. — E.G., Texas

Dear E.G.:

Every so often I use this column to remind players that the dollars they spend at charity Bingo go to help individuals and groups that need all the support they can get.

Of course, it stings to see the stranger two tables away walk away with the biggest jackpot of the night...again. Hopefully, your reminder will take a little of that sting away and help players remember the good that is being done by charity Bingos nationwide. — Aunt Bingo

The Phantom Kissers

Hi Guy,

We had some very awkward weirdness at Bingo this week, and not for the first time.

Several of the workers—like the caller, the cashier, the manager and a couple of others—wear body mikes throughout the evening, which they use to make quick announcements to the players or ask each other questions or make quick comments to each other. It makes sense—the hall is pretty big and the senior people can't always get away from the spot where they are working so that they can chase down another worker and ask him or her a question.

The way it works is that the person who needs to use the microphone flips a switch that turns it on, says whatever he or she needs to say, then turns it off again. It feels a little like being in a grocery store with people announcing today's specials, but everyone is pretty much used to it. A few times it has been funny when one of the miked people forgot to turn off the mike after using it or turned it on accidentally. (This is a charity Bingo run by volunteers who don't have a lot of experience with microphones.)

One time we were sitting in the hall when suddenly over the system we all heard water trickling. You guessed it...one of the guys was peeing in the bathroom.

Another time over the sound system we began to hear "chomp, chomp, chomp" like giant insects were eating the building. It turned out to be a worker eating potato chips in one of the back rooms.

There have been other small incidents off and on—people arguing, swearing, laughing and that sort of thing—that were picked up by a mike. But nothing like this week. This week it got sexy.

We were in the hall waiting for the games to start when all of a sudden over the sound system you could hear what sounded like kissing, accompanied by a little moaning and one or two "mmmmmm's." Somebody was being naughty!

The manager immediately jumped on the system and said: "Hey sweethearts, your microphone is on!" before bursting out laughing. The whole hall began to hoot and laugh and make fun of whoever it was.

Obviously, after the manager's comment the "show" ended. So far, no one has apparently owned up to being the phantom kissers, but there can't be more than five or six microphones so I bet they know who it was.

I did my best to I.D. any red-faced volunteers, but had zero luck. — Charles V., New York

Hi Charles,

This feels a LOT like a made-up story, but I enjoyed it so much I'm going to run it anyway.

If it's true, I am absolutely astonished that the manager didn't strip the other workers of their microphones immediately following the peeing incident. Certain kinds of technology simply do not belong in some people's hands! — Guy

Hey guys! (And gals!) Write to: Guy's Turn c/o The Bingo Bugle, P.O. Box 527, Vashon, WA 98070, or email Guy directly at Tonder22@aol.com. Be sure to include your name and address (you may request that your name not be published), as typically Guy will not include anonymous letters in his columns.

YOU ASK THE SENIOR QUESTION
~ WE FIND THE SAVVY ANSWER

What Older Diabetics Should Know About Coronavirus

Dear Savvy Senior,

My husband and I are both in our late sixties and have diabetes. We would like to find out if our diabetes increases our risk of getting the coronavirus. — Concerned Diabetics

Dear Concerned,

Currently, there’s not enough data to show that people with diabetes are more likely to get coronavirus (COVID-19) than the general population. But if you do happen to contract the virus, your chance of developing serious complications are much higher. This is especially true if your diabetes isn’t well-controlled. Here’s what you should know.

Diabetic Risks

Health data is showing that about 25 percent of people who go to the hospital with severe COVID-19 infections have diabetes. One reason is that high blood sugar weakens the immune system and makes it less able to fight off infections. Your risk of severe coronavirus infection is even higher if you also have another condition, like heart or lung disease.

If you do get COVID-19, the infection could also put you at greater risk for diabetes complications like diabetic ketoacidosis (DKA), which happens when high levels of acids called ketones build up in your blood.

Some people who catch the new coronavirus have a dangerous body-wide response to it, called sepsis. To treat sepsis, doctors need to manage your body’s fluid and electrolyte levels. DKA causes you to lose electrolytes, which can make sepsis harder to control.

How to Avoid COVID-19

The best way to avoid getting sick is to stay home as much as you can. If you have to go out, keep at least 6 feet away from other people, and wear a mask. And every time you come back from the supermarket, pharmacy or another public place, wash your hands with warm water and soap for at least 20 seconds.

Also wash your hands before you give yourself a finger stick or insulin shot. Clean each site first with soap and water or rubbing alcohol.

To protect you, everyone in your house should wash their hands often, especially before they cook for the family. Don’t share any utensils or other personal items. And if anyone in your house is sick, they should stay in their own room, as far as possible from you.

The CDC also recommends that you stock up on medications and diabetes testing supplies to last for at least a month. The same goes for grocery supplies and other household necessities.

Also know that Medicare is now covering the cost of telehealth visits, so if you have questions for your doctor, you can ask by video chat or phone instead of going into the office.

The 32nd Annual World Championship Bingo Tournament & Gaming Cruise

Liz Colantuono, 69, of Tamarac, Florida is passionate about playing Bingo, rarely letting a week go by without making it to a hall at least two or three times. She is equally fond of cruise travel, having been on more than thirty vacations-at-sea to date.

Not surprisingly, when Liz heard last year about the World Championship Bingo Tournament & Gaming Cruise, she jumped at the chance to sign up and come aboard. “I actually knew little about it until I came across a copy of the Bingo paper that talked about it. It sounded fun and I decided to give it a try.”

In comparing the cruise with other cruise vacations she’s experienced, Liz gives the trip high marks. “Oh, it was very good,” she says. “We visited nice ports, the ship was good, the food was good and there was a lot to do.”

Liz, a retired special education teacher, was also very happy with her World Championship Bingo Tournament experience. “I didn’t win, but still enjoyed it,” she says. “Because everybody had the same amount of Bingo paper, it was a nice feeling that it was all equal. Everyone had the same chance of winning. And the prizes were great; lots of prize money to go around.”

The 2020 World Championship Bingo Tournament & Gaming Cruise sets sail from Fort Lauderdale, Florida on November 7 and explores the eastern Caribbean and four exciting island destinations—St. Maarten; St. Kitts; San Juan, Puerto Rico; and Grand Turk.

This eight-day high seas adventure features marathon

Bingo, blackjack and slots tournaments, $100,000 in cash prizes, and the awarding of free passage for two on Cruise ’21 to the top winner—not to mention the coveted title of Bingo Grand Champion!

You’ll find yourself immersed in all kinds of fun when you experience this year’s host ship, Carnival Breeze. The Breeze has a great variety of activity, dining and entertainment options. It features a half-mile-long exterior promenade and an aqua park with 300-foot corkscrew water slide named Twister and another called The Drainpipe. It also has a 4-D cinema, Thrill Theater; Cloud 9 Spa; a jogging track and fitness center; Seaside Theater; Red Frog Pub; Winner’s Luck casino and bar; Liquid Nightclub disco; Punchliner Comedy Club; and Hasbro: The Game Show.

Other features include the Fahrenheit 555 Steakhouse; burgers custom-created by Food Network chef Guy Fieri; and the Cucina del Capitano, a family-style Italian eatery with an extensive nighttime menu.

With delicious food, bars and entertainment, Carnival Breeze has something for everyone. Add to that the magnificent ports of call, marathon Bingo playing, added fun in the Bingo Bugle Blackjack and Sizzling Slots tournaments, and connecting with fellow tournament fans from across the country, it’s no wonder that the World Championship Bingo Tournament & Gaming Cruise continues to grow in popularity.

Poker Talk

Celebrities Aren't Immune to Bad Beats

By Chad Holloway

Poker is an American pastime enjoyed by millions across the country. Even former U.S. presidents have been connoisseurs of the game, including Harry S. Truman, Barack Obama and, perhaps most famously, Richard Nixon, who was said to have funded his first run for Congress with poker winnings from his time in the Navy.

A lot of celebrities are fans of the game as well, including two-time Academy Award nominee James Woods, Jenna Fischer (The Office), Jason Alexander (Seinfeld), Cheryl Hines (Curb Your Enthusiasm), Rob Mariano (Survivor) and Kevin Pollak (The Usual Suspects).

In fact, Pollak played a memorable poker hand in the World Series of Poker Main Event back in 2012. It happened on Day 5 of the tournament with 134 players remaining. The hand began when Kirill Rabtsov raised to 52,000 from under the gun and Omar Saeed called from the button.

Pollak, who had 369,000 in chips, reraised all in from the big blind. Rabtsov jammed over the top, and that inspired Saeed to get out of the way.

Pollak tabled Qd Qc, and Rabtsov had the same hand with Qh Qs.

There was a 95.7 percent chance of a split pot (also known as a “chop”), while each player had a mere 2.2 percent chance of winning outright. The only way that would happen was if the board offered four cards of the same suit to give one of the players a flush.

The Kc 9h Kh flop delivered two hearts, which meant Rabtsov was freerolling. He could make a flush if two more hearts came, while Pollak no longer had a chance to hit a flush. In other words, Rabtsov still had a chance to win the pot - albeit a mere 4.6 percent chance - while Pollak could only hope for a chop.

The 3h turn made things interesting, as Rabtsov saw his odds of making the flush jump to 20.5 percent. The math still favored a chopped pot, but in this particular hand, on poker's biggest stage, a bad beat was in store. The dealer burned one final time and put out the 2h on the river to give Rabtsov a winning flush. Pollak wound up busting out in 134th place for $52,718 in prize money.

“When three hearts came, my heart sank to my shoes,” Pollak said years later. “If you gotta go, you gotta go. That was my time to leave the tournament. You have to tell that story for forever.”

With nearly $70,000 in lifetime tournament earnings, Pollak is one of the more successful and experienced poker-playing celebrities. Few have done as well in the WSOP Main Event as he did that year.

Even so, Pollak is still looking for that big breakout score - the sort that Hollywood royalty Ben Affleck and Jennifer Tilly enjoyed in years past. You may not be aware that Affleck won the 2004 California State Poker Championship for $356,400, while Tilly captured a gold bracelet when she won the 2005 WSOP Ladies Event for $158,335.
