

“The God we Profess”

This week we celebrate the Feast of the Holy Trinity – a celebration which not only proclaims our belief in a Triune God, but one which also confirms our response to Christ's command to make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that He has commanded.

Yes, our God is a mystery, invisible, and transcendent - but He is not just a thing, a force, a super intellect, a remote manipulator of people and history. He continues to reveal himself to us every day and every moment - through the Word and sacrament that nourish us in the community of the church, through the people and events that are constant reminders of his goodness.

The community of persons in the Triune God is simply the result of a divine love that is so intense and so profound that it cannot be contained or defined in one dimension. It is a love that not only creates, but a love that redeems and sanctifies. It is a love that brings light and warmth to the dark side of our journey. It is a love that is constantly healing our brokenness, lifting us above our selfishness and pettiness, and reaching out to save us when we edge toward the abyss of despair.

It is a love that engenders hope and courage; it is this Love that helps us to maintain a sense of purpose and peace and unity in our lives. It is this love that enables us to go out and preach to all nations.

Ultimately God embraces us through that deep inner awareness and absolute assurance of being loved uniquely and forever by our Triune God - who is with us always and whom we continue to praise and worship always.
