Some Civil War soldiers "changed horses in mid-stream," so to speak. Among those who come to mind is Lt. Richard K. Meade, Jr. who was serving inside Fort Sumter when it was fired on in April of 1861. He shortly resigned his commission in the U.S. Army and went home to Virginia where he entered the Confederate Army, the only Fort Sumter officer to do so. But he died very early in the war.

Another was Capt. Frank C. Armstrong of the all-Southern 2nd U.S. Cavalry, who fought on the Union side in the First Battle of Bull Run (July 21, 1861), but then resigned his commission the following month and went south to become a Confederate brigadier-general.

Lt. Manning M. Kimmel, also of the 2nd U.S. Cavalry, changed his uniform from blue to gray after the First Bull Run and became Adjutant to Confederate Gen. Earl Van Dorn. Lt. Kimmel became the father of Adm. Husband E. Kimmel who was in command of U.S. Naval forces at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

For those soldiers who wished to play cards, the American Card Company sold the "Union Playing Cards." They differed from ordinary cards in that the four suits were Eagles, Shields, Stars and Flags; a colonel was a king, the Goddess of Liberty was the queen, and a major was a jack.
