Atus Systems & Skygd AB Announce expansion into UK through Branding Partnership

BS8484 lone worker protection with unique indoor location positioning now available in the UK

March 21, 2016; Stockholm, SE / Hereford, UK: Skygd, a Swedish provider of lone working solutions and Atus Systems, a UK provider of paging and on site staff alarm systems based in Hereford, United Kingdom, today announced a UK branding partnership.

Atus Systems have branded the Skygd Personal Safety Alarm product as Atus Defender and added BS8484 compliance to the Android service. The unique lone worker protection system with indoor positioning is based on a modern cloud based architecture for alarms and associated services. The powerful construction and the flexible structure of the system makes it fast and secure so it can be easily deployed without any costly on-site infrastructure. The system can be self-managed and used easily by both alarm response centres (ARC's) and in-house control rooms alike.

“Skygd has developed and owns all the intellectual property rights to a unique indoor positioning solution that pinpoints exactly where an alarm has been triggered inside a building, positions us perfectly to jointly deliver a compliant solution to our customers. The Skygd solution has been providing lone worker protection and indoor positioning to Swedish customers since 2008 and we are delighted to be able offer this unique and powerful solution to the UK market” said, Darren Swindlehurst, Managing Director at Atus Systems.

“Providing lone worker protection and emergency response to those in distress is not a challenge exclusive to Sweden, our unique patented solution and new British Standard compliance addresses this” said Martin Reidevall, Chief Executive Officer of Skygd AB. “Skygd is proud to now be able to address these same challenges in the United Kingdom through this partnership with Atus Systems.”
