About Whyte Rose & Violet, Scribes

Whyte Rose & Violet, Scribes is the dream of Berkeley, California author Ellen L. Ekström. After five years with Central Avenue Publishing, LLC, Ellen struck out on her own with an independent press dedicated to fantasy, historical and literary fiction. The dream is simple – to offer stories, stories that we like to write and share with people of like minds and interests.

About Ellen L. Ekström

Ellen L. Ekström is a native of the San Francisco Bay Area and was educated locally. She holds a bachelor's degree in theological studies and her area of concentration is Christian Mythos, also known as church history, with a sub-specialty in Christian Social Ethics, for both of which she took honors. Ordained to the diaconate in 2002, she is a deacon in the Episcopal Church.

Ellen has been fascinated by all things medieval since childhood and is now studying Late Anglo-Saxon England in preparation for two forthcoming novels, Swannsaeld, and The Sometime Queen.

The genres Ellen prefers to work in are fantasy/historical: her first novel was The Legacy, a tale of fourteenth-century Florence and Tuscany, followed by her retelling of the St. George and the Dragon legend, Armor of Light, St. Edmund Wood, a story of Victorian England, and the sequel to Armor of Light, Ascalon. Occasionally she delves into matters of the modern heart, as evidenced by her novels in the Midwinter Sonata series, Tallis' Third Tune and Scarborough, which tell the same story of heartbreak and love from different points of view, and What She Wished For... a Cautionary Tale. Just as a painter has many subjects to bring to a canvas, Ellen believes that there are many stories to tell and to limit oneself to a niche isn't the way she lives or thinks.
