Debunked - the myth that you can't invest unless you have a lot of money! But the question is, should you be investing if you don't have a lot of money? Of course, "a lot" is relative, but consider some other factors before you tie up your last $50 in an investment.

Do you have money set aside for things like emergencies and car repairs? Investments are long term and it can be difficult to access that money fast, without penalty, if you need it right away.

So, before you invest, make sure you've laid your financial foundation.

Think about why it's important for your home to have a strong foundation. If it didn't, the house would crumble. It also keeps out moisture and insulates against the cold. It will take care of you, but only if the person who laid the foundation took the time to do it right.

The same goes with your money. Building a financial foundation assures that you'll be taken care of through life's ups & downs, unexpected mishaps and unwelcome surprises.
