CORPORATE HISTORY

Infinite Networks Corporation, a Nevada Corporation, was originally incorporated in 1996 as T-2 Logic Corporation, a general software and hardware development Company. In March 1998, the Company changed its name to Harrison Digicom, filed the requisite documentation to begin trading publicly as an Over the Counter, Bulletin Board listing in the U.S.—and, focused on opportunities in SE Asia in the telecom sector.

After a downturn in the telecom industry, the Company shifted its business strategy in 2006, repositioning its capital formation strategies to enhance its appeal to investors. Geopolitical trends globally have triggered changes in businesses everywhere—creating an opportunity for a return to the original vision for the Company.

INNX intends to re-launch its vision of an incubator for new businesses and as a vehicle for the re-financing of mid-sized businesses for all sectors of the US economy.

The Company has not wavered in respect of its focus on new technologies and the entrepreneurial innovations developed by new companies, and are truly engines of job creation and economic revival for the economy. Our technologies are maturing—and our state-of-the art energy devices can provide significant increases in efficiencies to augment local businesses and economies to complement the overall national energy grid.

Our intended financial structure, first envisioned in 2006, will now be implemented using a unique capital formation strategy for affiliated companies via the providing of gold bullion to support our share value and to mitigate the risk of loss for our shareholders as well as for shareholders in our subsidiaries and incubator companies.

INFINITE NETWORKS CORP

Infinite is launching a long-term business strategy as a technology incubator. Infinite intends to focus on green technologies, energy generation, and manufacturing.

Infinite's relationship with Jupiter Financial Group and the World Standing Together program provides opportunities to support new business development by allowing small business to access public markets and private funds and implement the strategies developed to serve as critical components in support of a revitalized and robust economic future for companies in the US.

Infinite's recent agreements with Jupiter Financial Group will bring to bear significant assets in support of its proprietary gold stock and coin redemption programs. All authorized common shares of Infinite and its subsidiaries and incubator companies will be collateralized by three grams of gold bullion to protect shareholders from certain market risks otherwise associated with stock investments.

Infinite intends to offer its gold share redemption program within the next 36 months. Shareholders of record will be able to swap shares for gold coins through Infinite's shareholder services. The objective is to demonstrate that Infinite's subsidiaries and incubator companies will be secure, and the collateralized shares are intended to be readily marketable by holders, thereby managing share price risk more efficiently and at greater levels than previously possible.

The intended program will likely provide Infinite the capacity to expand its capital base and thus its portfolio holdings via acquisition and financing campaigns in new markets for new companies – all without undue risk or dilution to shareholder value which would otherwise be concomitant with such expansion.

Infinite has continuously strived for some period to secure the relationships, assets, and related elements required for the intended plan, in order to provide our shareholders significant returns, plus long-term protection of their share's value. Infinite's intended private placement offering will become operative in the fourth quarter of 2018—thereby ensuring that its long-term vision becomes a reality, and 2019 will become a year to remember for our shareholders.
