Natalie Noone & the Maybes to Perform at Gram InterNational VI, Annual Nashville Festival Honoring Gram Parsons

Singer /Songwriter, Based in Nashville, Is the Daughter of 1960s Pop Star Peter Noone of Herman's Hermits

NASHVILLE, TN – October 29, 2013 – The recently formed, Nashville-based Natalie Noone and the Maybes will be featured performers at this year's Gram InterNational VI, the sixth annual concert / festival honoring the genre-bending musical contributions and legacy of Gram Parsons. This year, for the first time, the concert will take place over two nights—Friday November 8 and Saturday, November 9 at 6 p.m. at Douglas Corner Café—featuring 16 bands/artists, with Natalie Noone and the Maybes performing on Friday night, November 8 (scheduled for 6:50 p.m., with everyone asked to please arrive by 6 p.m.).

Asked why she is drawn to the “Cosmic American Music” of Gram Parsons and those he influenced, Ms. Noone responded, “Americana music, for me, is the best example of a kind of musical acculturation. It is a unifying thread weaving many different influences and backgrounds, and I am drawn to its truth and authenticity. I am pleased to be paying tribute to Gram Parsons, as he was a true pioneer.”

Raised in Santa Barbara, California, Ms. Noone moved to Nashville five years ago to pursue music and a B.A. in history. “My musical soul came alive the minute I stepped off the plane,” she says. Influenced by Parsons, Roy Orbison, the Everly Brothers, Dolly Parton, Rodney Crowell, and “anyone who recorded at RCA Studio B in Nashville,” Natalie Noone and the Maybes were formed in early 2013. The backing band includes members of the Nashville bands The Birdwings and Zach Ryan & the Renegades.
