Dr. Barbara Wilson-Keates is an RN with a clinical background in adult critical care across Canada and the US. As the Lead for High Fidelity Simulation and Clinical Assistant Professor, Faculty of Nursing, University of Alberta, she is actively involved in the education of interprofessional healthcare teams using simulation and other eLearning technologies. Barbara was instrumental in the development of an Interprofessional High-Fidelity Simulation Centre at Queens University in Kingston, ON, as well as developing and integrating online simulation technologies into a provincial critical care nurse education program. She is currently engaged with several interprofessional projects and research studies regarding the scholarship of simulation and other educational technologies. Barbara is committed to the development, delivery and evaluation of team-based simulation learning experiences for healthcare professionals across the educational sectors.