SERVICE DOGS

AND THE WINNERS ARE...

WIN! Patriot PAWS recently entered into an agreement with the SPCA of Texas' Jan Rees-Jones Animal Care Center in Dallas to evaluate rescued dogs as potential service dog candidates. Dogs meeting the criteria are fostered by Patriot PAWS for a time period of thirty days during which they receive basic foundation training and temperament testing. If a dog is deemed suitable to continue in the service dog program, the dog will enter into our prison program for additional training. If the dog is not deemed suitable, it will be returned to the SPCA having received basic training and a temperament evaluation making it potentially more adoptable to the general public. The first dog acquired by Patriot PAWS under this new agreement is a male black Lab mix named Rocky who is currently in the service dog training program.

WIN! The agreement that Patriot PAWS has with the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to teach carefully-screened female inmates to train service dogs continues to give the participating offenders skills they can use to make a living once they are paroled. Patriot PAWS currently employs two of the paroled trainers, and many others have gone on to work in dog-related fields as dog trainers, groomers or kennel workers. Additionally, the recidivism rate among the paroled trainers is substantially lower than the state average making the program an even bigger success.

WIN! The very reason that Patriot PAWS exists is to better the lives of disabled veterans through the assistance and love of a service dog. Restoring physical and emotional independence, dealing with PTSD issues and lessening the burden of care on family members are only some of the many ways that a service dog can change the life of a disabled veteran for the better.

Giving rescued dogs a chance to serve, teaching inmates to train dogs and making the lives of disabled veterans better...it's a win-win-win scenario for everyone involved, and Patriot PAWS would like to thank everyone who helps to make it all possible!

LETTER FROM LORI

One of my favorite stories is about a little blind boy who was sitting on some steps with a hat by his feet and a sign that read,

I am blind.
Please help.

There were only a few coins in the hat. A man walking by stopped and put some coins in the hat. He then picked up the sign, turned it around and wrote something on the back before placing it back by the hat and walking away. Soon, the hat began filling up as more and more people stopped to help the little boy. The man who had changed the sign later walked back by, and the little boy, recognizing his footsteps, asked him, "Are you the one who changed my sign? What did you write?" The man answered, "I said what you said but in a different way. I wrote,

Today is a beautiful day, but I cannot see it.

Both signs told people that the little boy was blind, but the second one made them feel fortunate that they could see. The moral of the story is to be thankful for what you have and to help those in need. Whether with coins or with service dogs, helping someone in need is a good way to make any day a beautiful day. You just have to see it with your heart.

VETERAN MICHAEL BARNER AND MARTI

Army PFC Michael "Gechee" Barner of Los Angeles, CA, served two tours in Vietnam. He was wounded multiple times while there including suffering a traumatic brain injury. He was also exposed to Agent Orange which has resulted in severe neuropathy causing poor balance and frequent falls. Additionally, Michael suffers from PTSD-related issues including anxiety, flashbacks and grief and numerous other physical ailments including losing consciousness due to low blood pressure.

In May 2013, Michael received service dog Marti, a female black Lab. Marti has brought Michael a sense of responsibility and regularity to his life. She senses when he is in pain and understands that he must take his medication and wait for it to work before he will feel well enough to play with her or take her outside. Marti also understands that when Michael's legs are hurting, the heat from her body lying across his legs makes them feel better. When they are out walking, Marti puts herself in front of Michael at curbs to keep him from falling off them into the street. Michael says that since getting Marti, he feels that he is truly home for the first time since coming back from Vietnam and that he finally has a family...Patriot PAWS.

ELI'S CORNER

Most would agree that summer unofficially starts with Memorial Day in May, reaches its highlight with Independence Day in July and ends with Labor Day in September. But somewhere among all the barbecues and fireworks and sales at the mall, the reasons for these holidays seem to get lost. I mean, how many of us actually stop and take a moment on Memorial Day to think about all those who gave their lives to preserve our freedom? And why do we watch fireworks on Independence Day? Is it solely for our entertainment, or is it to commemorate those "bombs bursting in air" that we sing about in our National Anthem? Perhaps we identify most with Labor Day, our day to celebrate the American worker, because that includes most of us, even dog trainer cats like me.

Now, I'm a Texas cat and proud of it, just as I'm sure you have pride in your home state. We have friendly sports rivalries between our states, and we even speak with different accents (me-ow, y'all), but we're all Americans. We share a common history of hard-won and hard-preserved freedom thanks to all of our brave men and women in uniform, past and present, which is why Patriot PAWS serves disabled veterans in every state, not just Texas. No matter which state they're from, those in uniform serve all of us, and all of us owe them a debt of gratitude.

So this summer, enjoy all those barbecues, fireworks and mall sales, but also take a moment to remember those who serve or have served because they're the ones who make them all possible.

Until next time, dear friends.

VETERAN TOM WARD AND MADDY

Marine LCpl Tom Ward lives in Myrtle Grove, NC, with his wife, Mary. Tom suffers from Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS) which is also known as Lou Gehrig's disease. ALS has already taken his upper body strength, but Tom is determined to keep moving and remains optimistic. After hearing about Patriot PAWS from another PAWS recipient at an ALS forum, he decided to apply for his own service dog to help him have as many tomorrows as possible.

In May 2013, Tom received service dog Maddy, a female yellow Lab. According to Tom, "Every single day, Maddy brings me joy. Maddy not only eases that sense of hopelessness but adds a wonderful new dimension. For example, when I need my hat, she gets it for me. When I drop things, and I do drop things often, she picks them up for me. More than anything, I love it when Maddy 'tells' me I'm tired and I need to sit down before I squander too much energy. She is this man's best friend. Thank you, Patriot PAWS."

VETERAN BRAD MITCHELL AND T-BOONE

Sgt. Bradley (Brad) Mitchell has been in the Army for six years. He served two tours in Afghanistan where he was a unit commander and was awarded a Bronze Star. He is currently an Army Reservist and lives in Tryon, OK with his wife, Tabitha, and two sons, Malachi and Stetson.

During his first tour, Brad was in the vicinity of a number of bomb blasts and suffered a traumatic brain injury that he was unaware of until symptoms in the form of seizures surfaced during his second tour. Brad also suffers from PTSD and a sleep disorder. His hope in getting a service dog was to become independent again and get back the part of his life that his injuries took away.

In May 2013, Brad received T-Boone, a male yellow Lab. T-Boone has given Brad a sense of security which allows him to now sleep several hours straight through and more easily go into crowds. He also has the confidence to be alone knowing that T-Boone will seek help if he has a seizure. "T-Boone is so smart and has already done so much. I don't know what we would do without him."

VETERAN DUSTIN DEWEERD AND GUNNY

Army SPC Dustin Deweerd of Dallas, TX, served in both Afghanistan and Iraq. He suffers from PTSD-related issues including anxiety attacks, blood pressure spikes and poor sleep. Dustin lived alone, so when he heard of Patriot PAWS through a VA doctor, he decided to apply hoping that a service dog would not only help him in dealing with his PTSD issues but be a sort of natural medicine

VETERAN DELANO SMITH AND CORYE

Army SGT Delano Smith lives in Radcliff, KY, with his wife, Melissa. Delano served in both the Gulf War and Iraq. He was in multiple explosions which left him with a traumatic brain injury resulting in balance issues and migraines. Delano also suffers from severe PTSD issues including nightmares and flashbacks triggered by everyday lights and noise. He heard about Patriot PAWS through Wounded Warriors.

In May 2013, Delano received service dog Corye, a female black Lab. During the initial graduation work sessions at the training center where each veteran works with each dog who is available for placement, Delano had a flashback triggered by a camera flash. Corye bolted to him to distract him and bring him back to the present making it evident that Corye had chosen Delano as her person to serve. Since receiving Corye, Delano says, "I have really bonded with Corye, she...keeps me calmer than I used to be." Corye has helped Delano tolerate a lightning storm and a flashing light on a cell phone and has made it possible for him to spend longer periods of time playing with his children and even to go bowling, things that he once found difficult because of the noise. "Thank you all from the very center of my heart."

by the company he would provide.

In May 2013, Dustin received service dog Gunny, a male yellow Lab. According to Dustin, "Gunny has made it a joy to live in my house. I feel as though he has leveled me out...and has made me more calm...I feel as though our bond is strong and becoming stronger. Gunny is truly amazing. I had no idea he would be so loving."
