Why Nutrition Response Testing?

Nutrition Response Testing is an easy-to-learn and easy-to-implement system to determine accurately what your patients need, even those who seem "unfixable." And you can learn the essentials of this system in a one-day seminar.

Who is Dr. Ulan?

Dr. Freddie Ulan, DC, CCN, has been one of the world's top nutritional practitioners and teachers for decades. He is a 1965 graduate of the Chiropractic Institute of New York, a Certified Clinical Nutritionist, and founder of Nutrition Response Testing. Dr. Ulan is the founder of Ulan Nutritional Systems, Inc. His team of highly qualified, expert practitioners is actively involved in teaching Nutrition Response Testing seminars throughout the country.

Based in Clearwater, Florida, Ulan Nutritional Systems is a training center for qualified practitioners to become Clinical Masters of Nutrition Response Testing.

"Your patients are ill because their diet can't support the body's organ systems, and may be suppressing them."

"How can you assess their nutritional priorities? If we follow the medical model, we compare our educated intelligence with that of the patient and come up with a diagnosis. This routinely fails! At best, we succeed in bypassing his nervous system and changing his symptoms."

"Muscle testing can be extremely accurate, but earlier systems were too complex, too time-consuming to perform in any volume, and too inconsistent in their results. We've changed all that."
-Freddie Ulan, DC, CCN

Your Speaker, Miranda Taylor, L.Ac, EAMP

In 1993, Miranda Taylor graduated from Cornell University with her Bachelor of Science degree in Biology. She then earned her master's degree in acupuncture and Chinese herbal medicine with honors, from the Northwest Institute of Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine in Seattle, WA in 2003. She also completed her hospital internship at the Chengdu Traditional Chinese Medicine Hospital in China.

Miranda was introduced to Nutrition Response Testing by her chiropractor in 2011 when she was seeking to improve her own health and was immediately intrigued. From there, she immediately enrolled in the Advanced Clinical Training program in Clearwater, Florida. She has been fully certified as a Nutrition Response Testing Clinical Master since 2014 and now owns a practice in Seattle, WA.

"Nutrition is one of the most important components in holistic health care practices today, but prescribing supplements without regular testing can be redundant or ineffective. Chinese nutritional theory works but requires some trial and error. Nutrition Response Testing has filled in many gaps in my knowledge and provides a subjective basis for better treatment plans for nutrition. Nutrition has benefited my patients, whose health was suffering, despite seeing medical doctors and alternative practitioners. Also Nutrition Response Testing benefits both the practice and the patients in that the evaluations and the treatments are streamlined and effective."
