THIS WEEK IN REVIEW!

It's Tuesday! And I am just now getting around to sending out our newsletter. Wow!

Last week we finished up with our summer camps with the always fabulous Debbie Craig and said our goodbyes to our amazing summer intern Catherine Cansler.

Don't worry Catherine will be back for holidays and to spend time with us next summer.

Here she is learning how to make jewelry. She was my partner in crime and helped me get so many projects done. I can't wait to have her back!

Yesterday this place was buzzing with activity. We installed our new exhibit, Sambas: A Retrospective.

We were fortunate to have Raymond Dumas, III with us to help with the install and this show is amazing! The opening is Thursday from 5:30-7 and Raymond will be here so make your plans to attend.

Some of his work is done with encaustic paints. I really didn't know much about the process so I did some googling. It is a truly fascinating process. Here is a link in case you were curious as well. I also found plenty of videos that demonstrate this method.

I know it's really early to be talking about this but the holidays will be here before you know it. If you are planning on hosting a holiday gathering or need a place to host your company party, why don't you have it here at GVA? Click here for a copy of the rental agreement.

If you are an artist and interested in having a booth at Art Under the Oaks this September, it's not too late.

That's all I have for now. We will be sending out information about fall class schedules soon. And you still have time to come make a bowl at Handmade for the Hungry!

Thank you for your continued support of GVA and see you Thursday for the opening!
