The amazing academic outcomes from Success Academy schools are too little known to us Chinese parents, and this session will correct that. In elementary and middle schools, Success' performance is comparable to, and often better than, that of the G&T programs and top selective schools that Chinese parents try so hard to get their children into. But now, the City closed down G&T programs because of "too many Asians," and the City turned selective schools to lottery admissions because of "too many Asians." Success Academy is a timely alternative for Chinese parents.

Better yet, once your child gets into Success Academy, he may continue all the way to a Success Academy high school if he wishes. You won't need to worry about getting into a good middle school, the rules for which can change any time, often against Asians, or into a good high school, the rules for which can also change any time, often against Asians.

Many Chinese parents aim to get their children tested into Specialized High Schools, which still exist thanks in large part to the fight the Chinese community put up to keep them. But without G&T and selective middle schools, how do you prepare your child for the rigors of Stuyvesant? Success Academy, taken through middle school, is a great path to prepare your child to do well at a Specialized High School. But more: Success Academy is also building out its own high schools, and early evidence is that they could be attractive for many kids even against the Specialized High Schools.

Finally, at Success Academy, your child will be taught by teachers -- and studying alongside classmates -- who believe in hard work, self-discipline, and taking responsibility -- what a change from regular public schools these days!

Success Academy schools are publicly funded, so they are free to families. Applying to them is easy and takes just a few minutes on their website. You can still apply to regular public schools while also applying to Success Academy.

So come and learn more about this hidden gem, and have your questions answered!
