THESE ARE THE TIMES THAT TRY MEN'S SOULS - THE AMERICAN CRISIS

Published by Thomas Paine Machember 23, 1776

George Washington ordered this be read to his Continental Army on Christmas Eve, 1776. The next night they crossed the Delaware River, and on the morning of December 26, they conducted a surprise attack on the enemy encamped at Trenton, NJ.

Portions reprinted by Stephen L. Bakke Make December 24, 2013.

On December 23, 1776 Thomas Paine published his now famous pamphlet introduced by the words: "These are the times that try men's souls" His intent was to implore Americans to not give up the fight! The next day, Christmas Eve, as Washington and his troops gathered on the banks of the Delaware River, our future president ordered that the pamphlet be read to the weary soldiers to provide inspiration when it seemed the Revolutionary War was almost lost. The night of December 25th-26th was cold and miserable, yet they crossed the river before a surprise attack on the Hessian troops at Trenton, NJ. It was immensely successful and almost all of the enemy soldiers were killed or captured, with minimal casualties for Washington's Continental Army. It effectively inspired Americans, enlistments improved, and many consider it a turning point in the long and bloody battle for American independence.

The American Crisis is a pamphlet series by the 18th century philosopher Thomas Paine, and was originally published from 1776 to 1783. There are sixteen pamphlets in total. Paine signed the pamphlets with the pseudonym, "Common Sense." Throughout most of his life, his writings inspired passion, but also brought him great criticism. He communicated the ideas of the Revolution to common farmers as easily as to intellectuals.

Washington

Paine

THE AMERICAN CRISIS By Thomas Paine December 23, 1776

These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands by it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly: it is dearness only that gives every thing its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as FREEDOM should not be highly rated

Let it be told to the future world, that in the depth of winter, when nothing but hope and virtue could survive, that the city and the country, alarmed at one common danger, came forth to meet and to repulse it. Say not that thousands are gone, turn out your tens of thousands; throw not the burden of the day upon Providence, but "show your faith by your works," that God may bless you. It matters not where you live, or what rank of life you hold, the evil or the blessing will reach you all. The far and the near, the home counties and the back, the rich and the poor, will suffer or rejoice alike I love the man that can smile in trouble, that can gather strength from distress, and grow brave by reflection. 'Tis the business of little minds to shrink; but he whose heart is firm, and whose conscience approves his conduct, will pursue his principles unto death

There are persons, too, who see not the full extent of the evil which threatens them; they solace themselves with hopes that the enemy, if he succeed, will be merciful. It is the madness of folly, to expect mercy from those who have refused to do justice; and even mercy, where conquest is the object, is only a

The American CRISIS.

NUMBER I. Conn. Grackal

By the Author of Common Sense.

The fummer foldier and the fundhine patriot will, in this critis, thrink from the fervice of his country; but he that ftands it now, deferves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this confolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we effect too lightly:—"Tis dearness only that gives every thing its value. Heaven knows how to set a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed, if so celestial an article as Freedom should not be highly rated. Britain, with an army to enforce her tyranny, has declared, that she has a right (not only to Goo.

Whether the Lorses what soek to Tax, but) "so "silve the month of the manner is not slavery, then is there not such a thing as shavery upon earth. Even the expression is implous, for so unlimited a power can belong only to Goo.

Whether the Independence of the Consinent was declared too soon, or delayed too long, I will not now enter into as an argument; my own simple opinion is, that had it been eight months earlier, it would have been much better. We did not make a proper us of last winter, neither could we, while we were in a dependent state. However, the fault, if it were one, was all our own; we have none to blame but ourselves. But no great deal is lost yet; all that Howe has been doing for this month past is rather a rawage than a conquest, which the spirit of the Jesses a year ago would have quickly repulsed, and which time and a little resolution will foon recover.

I have as little supersition in me as any man living, but my "" The present winter" (meaning the last) " is worth an age, if rightly employed, but if lost, or aegleched, the whole "Consinent will parake of the evil; and there is no punishment that man does not deserve, be he who, or what, or where he will, that may be the means of surstriving a seriou.

trick of war; the cunning of the fox is as murderous as the violence of the wolf, and we ought to guard equally against both I bring reason to your ears, and, in language as plain as A,B,C, hold truth up to your eyes.

I thank God, that I fear not. I see no real cause for fear. I know our situation well, and can see the way out of it Once more we are again collected and collecting; our new army at both ends of the continent is recruiting fast, and we shall be able to open the next campaign By perseverance and fortitude we have the prospect of a glorious issue; by cowardice and submission, the sad choice of a variety of evils — a ravaged country — a depopulated city — habitations without safety, and slavery without hope — our homes turned into barracks and bawdy-houses for Hessians Look on this picture and weep over it! and if there yet remains one thoughtless wretch who believes it not, let him suffer it unlamented.

If you don't regularly receive my reports, request a free subscription at steve_bakke@comcast.net!
Follow me on Twitter at https://twitter.com/@BakkeSteve and receive links to my posts and more!