

Software Development Documentation

DTD Software Development Documentation

The DTD System provides guidelines, and reference documents that will be used for generating documentation during the phased development of software applications.

These Guidelines and Reference Documents Include:

- Guidelines for the Creation Of Documentation During The Software Development Life Cycle
- Software Development Process

The methodology of mapping a Documentation Development Life Cycle (DDLC) with the Software Development Life Cycle (SDLC) is defined with a focus on writers or personnel that will be producing documentation for the software.