Illegal Surveillance, Mind Control, Remote Neural Monitoring

Presented by www.ourconstitution.info – nonprofit – nonpartisan

0:01 ... When I wrote the book and I kind of did my own searches and talked to some connections that I had within the CIA and just to verify exactly how this technology works, they wouldn't go as far as admitting putting voices in heads. They had no problem admitting the directed-energy capability

0:58 ... the only way out of it so because everybody's looking for ways to shield themselves and things like that and the bottom line is we're gonna need socio-political change probably to do anything about it ...

2:07 ... lieutenant in charge had been a patient of mine ... He told me straight out he said if I heard this story from anybody else I think they're crazy, but you had my life in your hands asleep on the table for surgery - I do anesthesia. And he said but you know coming from you and your stories never changed ... So they kinda they went through ICE and tried to see if any of this video, if they were videoing any of the sexual assaults and putting them anywhere. And basically ... it's like this group of this former FBI guy is allowed to do it ... Which is like what I kind of wondered all along is, you know, if I went following people around and tampering with their cars and standing around their front doors, you know I'd be arrested pretty quickly. And these guys were so brazen this wasn't surveillance from afar or I kind of think that cars following me, or I kind of think that person's following me. These were people literally standing in front of our windows, right until you would come walking down the sidewalk and they would run and jump in a car. Or three cars following me, moving jockeying around at 2:00 in the morning on a weekday you know in coming home from her house and shooting the finger at me when they would drive by. Or trying to block me in until I'd finally maneuver my way around and you know that only good thing about being in Texas is what ended the stalking was when the sheriff came out to my house and said you know what, you live in a rural area and if it's nighttime and they're on your property, shoot em. And this was not there was not anything that was questionable about what was going on ...

4:15 Why don't you just start by explaining what the problem is as you see it, and the ways in which classified technologies are being used on targeted persons ...

Well, from my experience it seems to be a form of remote neural monitoring is one of the terms we use for it. The other term is psychotronic weaponry, weaponry that has been designed to interact with the human nervous system in order to remotely pick up on someone's neural network or EEG and not only receive that and monitor it but manipulate it and place it back into the victim to control their emotions or control their actions or bodily functions for that matter. The other more recent term we have for that is EEG heterodyning or EEG cloning ...

5:55 ... I wish I could give you a good example of how it works. I know Robert Duncan worked on some of the projects. He claims it's a very complex you know mathematical situation that does it.

6:05 ...The bottom line though at least from what I've been told is that it's mostly based on Robert Malik's patent of remote neural monitoring in which he found that if you shoot two dissimilar frequencies into the human brain that the human brain will actually create an interference frequency as it tries to duplicate the two dissimilar frequencies and the interference frequency that gets transmitted back out of your brain can be decoded and your EEG digitally manipulated out of that. Now and that patent came out in like 1974 it was a Malech Robert Malech. And it was actually invented as a way to monitor pilots. That way if you had a pilot that was falling asleep or a pilot that was starting to hallucinate, they could see that remotely and then stimulate the pilot to wake him up or to bring him out of a delusion, especially fighter pilots that are on you know continuously long missions. It appears to be mostly being done in that way. Now one of the more scary things that's come to light lately is the way the NSA is monitoring our computer systems and they're doing that with continuous wave radar CWR ... Lately there's been a program of interdiction where you know the computers and smartphones and things are actually gotten before they actually reach our shores for sale and are being implanted with a particular type of implant. One of them is called a cottonmouth, at least four pcs, and that's a small chip that actually goes into the cord between the computer and the monitor. And when that chip is hit with continuous wave radar it will begin to transmit up to eight kilometers away whatever data is being sent from your computer to your screen. It may be monitored in real time or it may just be data that's collected you know automatically without anybody actually watching it. But one of the thoughts that we have is that it might be continuous wave radar being used on humans as well. And if you see Jacob Appelbaum, some of his speeches and reports and an exposure on this, he kind of alludes to some of Snowden's releases that the same technology that they're using on computers they may be actually using on human systems as well ...

9:32 ... One thing that we found a long time ago within a lot of the neurologic studies is if you bombard the brain long enough with a certain frequency the brain receives that frequency and adapts to that frequency and begins to operate in that frequency. Specifically with Malik's patent, if you're using two dissimilar frequencies and you get one hemisphere of the brain operating at one frequency, the other hemisphere at a different frequency, they create an interference frequency. We know the brain transmits that's why we can actually look at an EEG. Now traditionally in medicine you know we're using it with leads on the scalp and that was the whole point of his patent, is that you no longer actually had to have leads on the scalp, that it could be done remotely, with radiofrequency. Now that's not in sum the total of what these victims are experiencing that's the monitoring and maybe some of the emotion manipulation. Also, you can control the brain and making the body twitch or making the body do just about anything since everything's controlled by the brain. But there also seems to be a directed-energy component to the victimization of these people because most of them are also complaining you know eye burning, skin burning, and what would appear to be microwave energy-based weapons. Body heating. Most of those techniques used for sleep deprivation. Almost all of the victims that I've spoken to complain that the attacks seemed to be worse at night and seemed to be geared at actually sleep depriving them ... Directed energy weapons have been worked on for some time and if you look at the Addendum the Army's addendum to the technology of non-lethal weaponry that came out late 80s, they clearly talk about using direct microwave energy as a weapon. You know we're already seeing that and the active denial system, millimeter wave system, silent guardian, which is a joystick controlled a millimeter wave weapon that is actually being used experimentally in at least one Los Angeles prison.

11:48 When prisoners get out of line a guard can actually manipulate the beam and burn the person until they get out of the way of the beam. So that's been worked on you know for some time. Now how it's being delivered possibly via satellite or being delivered long range is classified technology that you know hopefully will eventually get somebody that's a whistleblower to tell us more about how that's done. From what I've been told by some of my contacts that a lot of this is being done, especially the weaponry, by satellite. There's been other you know world leaders you know that have complained about hearing voices and being attacked with directed energy. Of course most of these victims that complain about it or immediately sent to a psychiatrist who won't Google anything or won't look at any other research. But the directed energy component is has been around for quite a while, How it's being used on such a grand scale is yet to be seen...

13:32I think most of what we're dealing with in the victim population is probably satellite based or something much more remote than that. I know in my personal studies I've actually taken victims onto a ranch here in Texas where there's no power lines, there's no cell towers, you can do RF scans on the property and see that it's pretty clear, and these victims still hear voices, they still get attacked. I've done the same thing by taking victims in a boat into the Gulf of Mexico to escape the possibility of it being handheld weapons or neighbors - they still hear voices, they still get attacked. ...Some of the victims I've talked to they're probably a little better explaining their situation, have even got on planes and flown to other countries. I had one victim who's pretty well-off financially that actually flew to Cuba to try to get away from this and was still hearing voices and still being attacked even in Cuba. Just so you know, these are all people that you know were professionals, were educated, were functioning in society just fine, and most of them were between 30 and 40 when they first started getting victimized. Much older than you would typically see somebody all of a sudden come down with schizophrenia and no reason to have all of a sudden developed an acute delusional disorder ... Most of them were functioning, most of them are professionals. I've talked to a lot of doctors, a lot of lawyers, whistleblowers from the Natl Geospatial Agency, a couple of whistleblowers I've worked with from the NSA. These were functioning people and they can tell you the day they started hearing voices and started experiencing attack and typically it's in the 40s, late 30s early 40s, with no history of mental illness and high functioning in society prior to that day ...

16:26 ... many of them are placed on medications meant for schizophrenia or for delusional disorder and so they're stuck on these medications and they're still being attacked and they're still hearing voices. The symptoms won't subside with traditional psychiatric treatment ...

19:39 ... It's truly organized stalking ... You'll notice people unknown to you. These aren't people hired by a loved one or anything, traditionally, or not an ex-boyfriend or ex-girlfriend. But all of a sudden you notice the same vehicles following you everywhere you go. People standing around your front door. Standing around work. Creating scenes and grocery stores around you where you know they may be talking to someone else you know within earshot of you but talking about something you did or something you said to a loved one. And it's geared to let you know that there are people that know your lifestyle and know the specifics of your lifestyle ...

20:57 ... I think this is probably being done by private investigators. However, its private investigators usually with former CIA or former FBI experience. And which is why they're being allowed to access the technology. At least in in the case here in San Antonio it was the PI group that we identified here. It was a former FBI fraud investigator that opened up his own private investigative agency after he retired. He hired nothing but his family members and pretty much advertises corporate espionage and as the guy you turn to if you want to harass an ex-wife during a divorce proceeding to make her look crazy, possibly to get out of paying child support or get custody or kids or to get out of paying alimony. Other than getting you down that pathway to a psychiatrist and putting in you a victim mind-set I think the other function of the organized stalking is to GPS you by vicinity. Most of these victims think they're chipped because they seem to be able to be tracked everywhere they go. We have found a handful of chips in people but by and large, after looking at thousands of MRIs and not only me doing some RF scans looking for chips, but ICAACT, which is an organization I'm affiliated with, has actually gone around the country actually scanning a lot of victims doing radiofrequency scanning. While we will find radio transmissions either emanating into or from the victim, when you image those sites, we're not typically finding chips. Which leads me to believe that most of this is probably being done without any type of an implant. Well the way you would do that in my mind would be to stalk that person and GPS then by vicinity until you can use whatever technology that is being used to remotely track them you know by their EEG. There's other ways to remotely track someone by body imaging by facial recognition. I've heard some of the people talk about now DNA resonance, which using continuous wave radar if you

bombard the human body with it we all have a different DNA signature, and that that can actually resonate and be received 26:38 ... Why them? Why you for example? Well in my case in the book the girl that I was engaged to had kind of attracted the fancy of a an older ear nose and throat surgeon in San Antonio who had told me several years ago that he had this former FBI guy that he referred to as the ghost that did this barely legal ...

28:05 I started following those vehicles writing down the plate numbers they all came back to this PI agency that he had told me about several years prior that he used to harass competitors corporate espionage type of stuff. So she was strictly targeted just basically by someone interested in sexually assaulting her which was what wound up happening with her. Now most of the other victims I've talked to they're almost seems no reason for their victimization. I have had a handful of whistleblowers from government agencies that have come to me that are being targeted for being whistleblowers, but by and large, most of the victims seem to be randomly selected. At least from a medical standpoint, being a physician and a researcher, this looks to me to be experimentation. It's being done in every major city, it's being done methodically, like it's being done with a manual, an instruction manual. Most of these victims will kind of report the same scenarios that they're hearing in their heads, report the same scenarios with the organized stalking, and the same scenarios with the directed energy attack. So in my

29:21 mind, on a grand scale, it's probably experimentation or continuation of MKULTRA. Having had their hand slapped initially by the Rockefeller Commission and the Church Committee hearings I think what they did was be a little more careful to farm this out to governmental or prior governmentally hired people who are now in private industry so there's some plausible deniability when and if these people ever get caught. ... it would appear to me that they're able to carte blanche to select the victims however they want to as long as the data goes back to the appropriate agencies at the top. So it seems like the stuff that Snowden leaked out was really just the tip of the iceberg compared to this really high-tech surveillance that's going on that we know nothing about. Yeah, I think it was the tip of the iceberg and you know he has a lot more documents to release. So I'm wondering if some of this is eventually gonna come around. You know Russell Tice had alluded to some of this when he was a whistleblower from the NSA. He had initially mentioned that it wasn't just phone calls going overseas that they were listening to, that they were listening to you know pillow talk between you know married men and their girlfriends, and basically kind of gave the scenario that they knew specific times that they could tune into civic phone calls, and basically listen to you know married guys and their girlfriends as entertainment. It's come full circle to where even the NSA admitted that they've caught a number of

31:19 ... their agents using this technology and what they kind of kiddingly refer to as Loveint instead of human intelligence Humint, signals intelligence SIGINT, Loveint, where NSA agents are using this technology to spy on ex-wives or run the plate numbers and spy on girls that they possibly met or seen at a grocery store, and if you look at the way the victims spread out demographically, and there's been studies on this. Freedom From Covert Surveillance and Harassment you know has ongoing studies you know checking the data demographically who's being victimized. Seventy percent or so of the victims are female and most of these people are not radicals are not politically inclined. They're educated people that were functioning in normal jobs and having normal lives until one day they started hearing voices and being attacked and being stalked. It seems to be intentionally a random sample... Trust me, I certainly didn't want to be, you know the spearhead of this movement. You know I'm a medical doctor, was engaged to a girl who was a mortgage broker, you know our plan was to be married and start a family and just live out the rest of our lives normally. It was never planned in my life to have this book or my next book come out or deal with any of this and certainly not be the spearhead against any of it ...

34:56 ... it actually started in the late 50s you know early 60s with MKULTRA. Now once you know they got their hand slapped at the Rockefeller Commission you know a lot of information came out of freedom of information and there's been some really good books written on MKULTRA based on what the government released in freedom of information. Well, most of these sub projects you know found success. You know the research didn't stop. The flow of freedom of information certainly stopped, but the research continued under different names, different operation names, and certainly with them being a lot more careful as far as how anyone would actually pick up on the fact that it's experimentation. So, at least in my mind, when you have, you know an estimated 300,000 people voicing identical complaints of hearing voices, voice to skull, directed-energy weapons attack, and what would appear to be a random sample, it's got to be experimentation, and the only place I can see that going is figuring out you know long-term study - because most of these victims have been victimized for 10 years or more ...

37:27 ... they've been looking for a way to control the masses and when the technology got to the point where directed energy could be used remotely, with weaponry that actually can manipulate the human nervous system, I think the end game is mass population control. In an interview probably about a year ago, Putin actually admitted that Russia has been working on psychotronic weapons for quite some time. None of our media picked up on that. ... Putin said that whichever country controlled the best psychotronic weapons would control the globe without bullets or missiles. You control the decision-making you don't need bullets or missiles ...

40:28 ... It's no longer, as people used to say, the government's supposed to fear the people. it's the other way around now, the people fear the government. We have a government that's out of control ...

40:47 ... I think most of the Congress people know this exists. Most of these victims immediately send letters to their respective Congresswomen and Congressmen...

41:57 ... so many loopholes in the common rule that it's very easy for black-budgeted intelligence agencies to have this type of experimentation with no known institutional review board and nobody overseeing the research. John Glenn when he was a senator tried to pass a bill making informed consent an absolute requirement for any federally funded research or experimentation and Congress shot it down, they wouldn't pass it. You may remember a couple of years back they had the Bioethics Commission's hearing. I spoke at one of those hearings. When the press released the fact that the Guatemalans had been experimented on similar to the Tuskegee Experiment with... weaponized forms of gonorrhea and syphilis, it wasn't until that had media exposure that Obama appointed the Bioethics Commission. Their job was to find out if any non-consensual experimentation funded by the government was still ongoing in our country or abroad. There were four meetings. At each one of those meetings there were well over a hundred people in the public forum. Almost all of the people in the public forum and work forum were complaining of electronic harassment, directed-energy attack, and hearing voices. Unfortunately the people he appointed to the actual board to hear it were mostly apologist bioethicists from Harvard and Yale. I was the only person that actually got up there and pointed out the loopholes in the common rule that allows for non-consensual experimentation. Some of the writing in that legislation is such that it essentially says that it's okay to perform the experimentation as long as the experimentees are notified after the fact. Typically that's what you've seen done with our government. We did it with radiation experiments when we you know flew radioactive clouds of iodine over major cities to see how quickly people would get thyroid cancer. As people came in reporting sickness they were told they were crazy. Well then when Clinton got to office we had the Acre Hearings and he made all of these agencies put forward their data and lo and behold these people weren't crazy they were getting leukemia, they were getting thyroid cancer and they were getting radiation sickness...Same thing with the Tuskegee Experiment, the syphilis study. These men were infected intentionally with syphilis, denied treatment for a lifetime, passed on that infection to their wives, their girlfriends, and their children, who passed on syphilis to their children. It wasn't until there was some media exposure forty years into the experiment that this was done. Then the surviving members and surviving family members got a lame apology from the government. That's typically what our

44:56 government has always done. Do the experimentation, once the media brings it to light give the survivors an apology. And that's one of the things that we're hoping to avoid with electronic harassment and this experimentation is bring it to an end while the victims are actually still around to show up at a hearing...

45:55 ... One thing I will say while MKULTRA was mostly a CIA program I think probably a lot of this being done today is probably NSA based. The NSA does seem to be focusing more of their attention on some of these more exotic weapons. ...With all the surveillance that's going on they seem to be surveilling us mostly. You know none of this surveillance seems to be curtailing terrorism. ...While they're passing most of this off as a national security issue we're not catching any terrorists. You know the Middle East is on fire. Almost all of those countries are back under radical hands. They all hate us. ...Your chances of dying in a car crash going to work as one in 30 your chances of dying from a terrorist bomb is damn near one in a million ...it's easy to scare the public with terrorism and terrorist bombs but we're giving away our civil rights, we're giving away our privacy to protect ourselves from a boogeyman that I think is just really non-existent. ... Aaron Alexis went and shot up the Navy Yard. You know he had emailed Freedom From Surveillance and Harassment several times asking for help and complaining and complaining about the sleep deprivation mostly ... He worked in the IT sector. He was familiar with this this weaponry he knew his extremely low frequency wave weaponry which is why he edged that on the side of the shotgun ...

50:05 ... I get emails from just about every country in the world with people complaining about this and in at least from a medical perspective you know for a psychiatrist or for a medical doctor that maybe sees one person in their practice that's complaining of this it's real easy to see it as mental illness but when you dive into it a little deeper like I have and you're really seeing the vast numbers of people globally that are having not similar but identical complaints then it's clear as day that there's something more to it ...
