

As a native of the Netherlands, born and raised in Amsterdam, I moved to Bradenton with my family in 2005.

I have always been creative and designed and made my own clothes, since I was in High school.

I took my first pottery class in 2008, and was hooked on clay immediately.

I love to make functional pieces on the pottery wheel.

My work is inspired by the South Western Native American pottery, more recently I started to experiment with more “earthy” firing techniques like Raku, Horse hair, Saggar and Obvara.

My work is for sale at the Artist market of Art Center Manatee, Art studio & Gallery of Jerri Philips, J&J Gallery in Lakewood Ranch, Etsy and various local art shows.
