I found John Groh's book "Rubbing God's Ear With His Promises" most interesting because of the way it is broken down into categories, and how it applies to everyday situations. You can journey through this book by reading a prayer or poem each day, or go to a category that reflects where your life is in any given moment and find a passage that will help and guide you. I find this book to be a great resource and a great way to communicate with God. As I've read through this book I found myself reflecting on many things I have not thought about in some time, and John's words created a better understanding for me. I have already shared this book with a friend who recently lost his mother and found some of the prayers very comforting for the feelings and sadness he is going through at this time in his life. I think this book would be a great gift and a great resource for someone going through a difficult time in their life, as well as for someone experiencing a joyful time in their life.
