Thank you again [REDACTED]. Well, the whole thing is unfortunate. However, if I am requesting my money back I guess I should offer the pin back. I will write a bit more here, if you wish to read it ... I have learned a lot about the state of our nation these past few years. It is actually stuff we should all realize.

As you may know, Eisenhower warned about the rise of the military-industrial complex and Truman regretted the formation of the CIA. It seems both felt these entities were necessary at the time -- and it is unfortunate that they did not have greater checks/balances, and a date of sunset or cessation, either actual or upon end of the primary conflict. It is clear now anyway, that even Americans, of any religion, who are operating without verified boundaries, can be as disgraceful, illegal, and immoral, as anyone. Truman warned that the CIA stirs up trouble to justify their existence. These concerns that both men had are things I have seen -- destructive, hateful actions for the sake of hate (and clearly high-level).

Someone (or more than one person) is getting paid (a lot) by us, the taxpayers, to act outside the bounds of the Constitution, and any semblance of decency. I am sure that I am not the only one (personally) subject to this, for any reason. Whistleblowers are threatened and harassed, to the highest levels of government, all the time. On a different level, but same sort of abuse -- the political parties just tear each other apart, wasting time, money, and productivity. How much progress did this recent three year long political battle and Federal investigation cost us all? Both sides do it, and there is also a lot of money that gets paid out while keeping "stuff stirred up". This will go on in perpetuity, because of the money and power, unless a concerted effort is made to stop it.

I think we should do away with political parties. Our system may be one of the roots of our problems. It allows for no (enforced) oversight of the Intel Apparatus, for one, and candidate competition is limited to only those with money. We should vote on people not by parties, but individually, those who get so many names on a petition, limited campaign costs with aid for those needing it to the max allowed, and no lobbying ... Maybe a numerical system for each candidate should be used, and the total score based upon their views. We all can choose the one with a score closest to our views... Just a thought. We all overlap in opinions anyway, and our current duopoly, confining us to this or that (party), does us all a disservice. That type of accountability and process, devoid of money influencers, will filter down and enable a more humane and just society... Moreover, let some of these industries like tobacco and alcohol pay for their own (healthcare) costs to society -- then our individual healthcare costs would be much more manageable. Of course, those in this money cycle want it status-quo and would not agree with my attitude of more fairness and participation.

I assure you the retaliation against me does also have a political component, as wide a reach and costly as the harassment has been. Although, I take whatever I agree with from all sides, regardless of party. Can you imagine the amount of time and effort (and money) that has been spent retaliating against me? Me??? Someone has (I am sure many people have) a job to "stir up trouble" or worse, follow orders, whatever it is, without question, and this is truly a disgrace for Country. Could even be the FBI -- they need an overhaul -- never got back to me with the first phone call ... My UM supervisor pointedly told me that her relative was an FBI agent ... How's that for ethics? It is a shame, because it is not what we are supposed to be, is not humane, nor decent, and is at the end of the day, counterproductive. Because Hadassah choose not to do the least bit of investigating-- or maybe they do know what is going on and choose to do nothing -- they just lost a concerned, hard-working member.

I don't think we should keep our heads in the sand -- these days there is too much at stake. The Intel Apparatus needs review, reform, and valid, reliable, and verifiable oversight. Who knows how far they have morphed since Eisenhower and Truman. The powerful could and will take on anyone next, if they don't agree with a person, or UM thinks a person (me) "complains too much" and possibly asks their buddies based at UM (CIA) to "help out", asks someone's FBI relative, or whatever ... Maybe we should take a cue from Israel, and how much more healthy the military and citizenry interaction is. Here the military and civilians are almost on two different planets -- very sad -- that is also an important predictor of a functioning, productive society. I think that military model also affects the relationship of the entire Intel App with everyone else. Even the prison system in Israel is much better (well, Florida is a disgrace) ... These would be very important steps to look at, I would say necessary changes as well.

Thank you again [REDACTED]. I do have a website, ourconstitution.info, should like to read more about this type of thing. I started it about 3 years ago because of what I was being subject to by UM (and whomever), and my other serious concerns. We all need to demand change before it is too late to save any semblance of our decency and humanity. Kindest regards, Judy
