Preparation of the Gifts

When the Prayer of the Faithful is completed, all sit, and the offertory chant begins.

The altar, which is the center of the whole Liturgy of the Eucharist, is prepared by the deacon, assisted by the acolyte or other lay minister, placing on it the corporal, purificator, Missal, pall, and chalice. If he is present, it is the deacon's place to take care of the sacred vessels himself.

It is preferred in the Archdiocese of Portland that the bread and wine to be consecrated are done so in the sacred vessels from which they will be distributed. This avoids the unnecessary division of the consecrated species into other vessels before the Communion Rite. This also avoids unduly prolonging the preparation of the altar.

The offerings are then brought forward. The procession bringing the gifts is accompanied by the offertory chant, which continues at least until the gifts have been placed on the altar. The norms on the manner of singing are the same as for the entrance chant. Singing may always accompany the rite at the offertory, even when there is no procession with the gifts.

The bread and wine may be accompanied by other gifts for the relief of the needs of the Church and of the poor, in the form of money or material goods. In the latter case, the quantity of material presented should be moderate and restricted in size, in such a way as to have a token value, leaving the rest of the intended gifts to be delivered outside of the celebration of Holy Mass. Care should be taken that whatever is carried in the offertory procession is strictly related to the sacred celebration and maintains its dignity. Items such as Christmas gifts for the celebrant, or the like, should be strictly excluded.

The offerings are received by the priest, assisted by the deacon, acolyte, or other minister. The bread and wine for the Eucharist are carried to the altar, while other gifts are put in another appropriate place but not on the altar.

The bread and wine are deposited on the altar by the priest to the accompaniment of the prescribed formulas. Since the Precious Blood cannot be reserved, only that amount of wine should be consecrated which will be consumed by the faithful.

The priest may incense the gifts placed upon the altar. If incense is used, the priest then puts some in the thurible, blesses it without saying anything, and incenses the gifts, the cross, and the altar, so as to signify the Church's offering and prayer rising like incense in the sight of God. The deacon assists the priest during the incensation of the gifts, the cross, and the altar; afterwards, the deacon himself, the acolyte, or another minister incenses the priest and the people.

The priest then washes his hands at the side of the altar, a rite that is an expression of his desire for interior purification.
