

MOOSE FACTS

The Origin of the word "MOOSE" is thought to be from "mus" or "moos" of the Algonquian (North American Indian) family of languages thought to mean "eater of twigs."

Moose are big! An adult moose averages 1,000 pounds & stands 6 feet at the shoulder. It is the largest land mammal in NH

Moose Teeth

Moose have teeth which are specially designed for eating plant materials and for browsing on bushes and small trees.

In all, they have 32 teeth made up of 12 ridged molars, 12 premolars, 6 incisors and 2 canines.

Incisors are the front teeth. Like other members of the deer family, moose only have lower incisors, and do not have upper incisors (though they have both upper and lower molars).

As moose get older, their teeth get worn out. Worn out teeth lead to reduced food intake, and reduced physical condition.

Breeding

Sexual maturity: 16-28 months

Rut (Mating season): September to October

Gestation: 240-250 days • No. of young: 1 or 2

Lifestyle

Habitat: Solitary or in small groups

Diet: Leaves, branches and twigs, water and marsh plants.

Moose may consume 45 pounds of food per day.

Lifespan: Up to 20 years. Average 10-15 years

Moose can trot as fast as 35 miles an hour.

They are good swimmers and can remain underwater for up to a minute.

Moose are ruminants, and spend much of their life chewing cud.

Moose Antlers

Bull Moose shed their antlers each winter and grow a new set each spring.

Cows do not grow antlers.

The Reindeer/Caribou is the only deer species in which both the male and female have antlers!

The greatest antler spread of a bull taken in NH is 68 inches.

Moose Hunting

An annual moose hunt occurs in NH each October.

Permits are issued annually through a lottery process.

The statewide success rate is about 75%.
